Drive is Near.

GENEVA, Oct. 15—France has given Premier Benito Mussolini just ten days to "come around" and make an offer of conciliation in the Italo-Ethiopian war, International News Service learned from a dependable diplomatic authority today.

If he refuses, France will plunge headlong into full support of firm sanctions against Italy, which she heretofore has refused to do.

Furthermore, it was learned, Premier Pierre Laval has made a new proposal for immediate settlement of the conflict, but is continuing to lay down as the principal condition maintenance of Ethiopian independence.

Must Accept Plan
If Italy is to accept this new proposal, it must be done within the stipulated ten days, according to the ultimatum-like French terms.

Great Britain also has had a hand in these new moves for a peaceful settlement of the war, displaying as usual, an extremely firm hand.

Sir George Clerk, British ambassador to Paris, told Laval that conciliation negotiations with Italy could be started only if Italy agreed the withdrawal of all troops from Ethiopian territory back into Eritrea or Italian Somaliland.

The proposals and the conditions surrounding them were believed

HAUPTMAN GIVEN
30-DAY RESPITE

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 15—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today was granted a stay of 30 days to permit his lawyers to ask the United States Supreme court to review his conviction for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

The stay was granted by the court of errors and appeals—the same tribunal which last week denied Hauptmann's appeal for a new trial.

The order—technically a "stay of remittitur"—delays the resentencing of Hauptmann, made necessary by his appeal.

If the U. S. Supreme court declines to review the celebrated case, Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, trial judge, will resentence Hauptmann at Flemington and fix a new date for his execution in the electric chair of the state prison here.

Lower Than General
Average in State

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Pickaway county spends $161.03 per inmate to operate and maintain the county home, a report by State Auditor Joseph Tracy revealed today. This per capita cost is smaller than the general state average which amounts to $252.23 per inmate.

During 1934, Pickaway county spent $9,661.85 for operation of the home, which housed on the average sixty inmates. The report also shows that the maintenance of children's homes in the county cost $260.35 per capita as compared to the general state average of $218.65 per child. The average number of inmates in these homes in the county was forty, and the total expenditures for this purpose during 1934 amounted to $10,414.11.

Kewanee, Ill. Plant Scene of Violence; Damage Reaches
$15,000

KEWANEE, Ill., Oct. 15—Hurling tear gas bombs, Kewanee policemen and sheriff's deputies today dispersed rioting picketers at the Boss Manufacturing Company plant here after bricks, hurled by the rioters, had smashed 10,000 windows in the plant, causing $15,000 damage.

The riot broke out last night when picketers learned that company officials, believing the strike virtually over, were bringing in six workmen to overhaul the plant's machinery and prepare it for resumption of work.

Filing the air with flying bricks, the rioters charged the plant. In the fracas, one policeman was struck by a brick, but was not seriously hurt.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 15—No troops have been ordered to duty as yet at the Boss Manufacturing Company plant at Kewanee, scene of a serious riot last night, Adj. General Carlos E. Black told International News Service today.

DECORATORS BEGIN
WEEK'S ACTIVITY

Ferd Segna and Don Bollenbacher, float builders and decorators, are in Circleville this week decorating store and building fronts for the Pumpkin show.

They are working here after obtaining permission from the show society.

The men are visiting the various business houses in the interest of decoration for the big event. Their work has been praised in many cities where they have decorated for conventions and other large gatherings.

They carry their own weather-proof decorations including pennants, bunting, banners, etc. and put them up and take them down.

DAIRY ARRANGES
LOT FOR PARKING

There's going to be an automobile parking lot available for Pumpkin show visitors. It is on the Pickaway Dairy Co. property, W. Main-st., former location of the Colonial Carriage Co.

Police asked residents to co-operate and not to park longer than absolutely necessary in the business section.

IL DUCE'S SON
IS UNDER FIRE

Bruno Flies Observation Plane
Over Makale; Four Bullets
Through Plane

ITALIAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, ADOWA, Oct. 14—Premier Mussolini's son Bruno's observation plane was fired upon over Makale today, and the young flyer returned to the army airport with four bullet holes in his plane's wings, but not hurt himself.

Bruno was on a reconnaissance flight fifty miles south of the Italian lines over possible enemy country when he spotted a large group of some two hundred native soldiers in Khaki uniforms in the main square of Makale.

The group was supposed to be the Emperor's special escort, which deserted from the Swiss engineer biplane several days ago. Bruno Mussolini dove low over the town and circled three times, taking photographs and making observations, his plane was not equipped with bombs, although it was equipped with machine guns.

Each time the plane circled it was met with a volley of rifle fire from houses in the town.

With valuable photographs of his first exploit under fire or rather over fire—Bruno returned safely to the air port.

ZENGE TO CLAIM
SANITY DEFENSE

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—Mandeville Zenge, taciturn young Missouri farmer, today will begin his defense against the state's charge that he perpetrated the strange mutilation-murder of his successful rival for the hand of pretty Louise Schaffer Bauer, Dr. Walter J. Bauer.

A parade of alienists will mark the defense's day in court, for the attorneys fighting for the life of the tight-lipped, love-lorn Zenge have indicated they will show he was mentally deranged at the time of the strange crime.

Testimony of the mental experts expected to testify for both sides through hypothetical questions, as to the sanity or insanity of Zenge at the time of the crime, may leave the jury with something in the nature of the validity of free will to discuss. The defense has hinted it will prove he was the victim of temporary insanity, of "irresistible impulse."

The state closed its case yesterday, as spectators fought in a mad, wild free-for-all to gain entrance to the courtroom and hear the testimony of the comely young widow who jilted her sweetheart of eight years to marry Dr. Bauer, middle-aged chemistry teacher.

Gov. Davey
On Radio

To Broadcast on WAIU, Other
Stations Eight Weeks for
15 Minutes

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Beginning next Monday, Gov. Martin L. Davey will be "on the air" for 15 minutes each Monday evening for eight weeks, it was learned here today.

The governor, through the Democratic state committee, completed negotiations for the facilities of the all-Ohio network of seven stations, with WAIU, Columbus, the key unit.

In addition to WAIU, radio stations over which the executive will carry his messages to the people of Ohio will be WHK, Cleveland; WSPD, Toledo; WKBN, Youngstown; WADC, Akron; WSMK, Dayton, and WKRC, Cincinnati.

Hour of his Monday evening broadcasts will be 7:15 to 7:30 p. m.

Cost of the radio facilities to the state committee was not announced.

Questioned about the theme of his projected radio discourses and also about who is to foot the bill, the governor seemed surprised that news of the venture had leaked out and refused to comment.

He did, however, promise that a "public announcement" later will throw additional light upon his program.

One report, unconfirmed but coming from a reliable source, was to the effect that the eight radio addresses over seven stations will cost $11,000. Ohio pays its chief executive $10,000 a year salary.

The show society by Sturm & Billard.

L. S. Shaner, show director and city safety director, informed the directors the sand would have to be removed early Sunday morning to prevent accidents.

After a long discussion the directors voted for Harry Briggs, horse show chairman, to employ truckers and workmen to spread the sand and then remove it early Sunday.

Residents complained to city officials last year that the sand blew into their homes and business places during and after the Pumpkin show.

Officials Hopeful

All rides were being erected today with idle townspeople watching the operations of the skilled mechanics. Mack Parrett, show secretary, was scamping hither and yon trying to smooth out disputes over location. Tom Krinn was checking up on his free acts to see that all were in town and ready for action.

In fact everything was hulloabaloo in preparation for the opening of the thirty-second annual Pumpkin show. A bright sun added to the spirit of the week today, and show officials and merchants were hopeful the sun would remain bright through the entire week to draw more of the gigantic crowds.

RUMOR IS BLASTED

Rumors that the Pumpkin show would be called off because of diphtheria were blasted today by show officials. "There are several known cases," they declared "but these have been quarantined and the show is going on."

The rumors were spreading in several of the county's towns.

that usually visit the big affair into town.

When noon arrives on Wednesday the chimes in the tower of the court house will greet the annual fall festival with a band concert to follow immediately after.

At 1 o'clock the first free attraction will be staged at Main and Pickaway-sts., "The Flying Le-Vans", at 3 p. m., according to the official program, the "Statosphere Man" will perform at Court and High-sts; at 4 p. m., Main and Scioto-st will be the scene with Marie Dumont, accordion wizard, and Silver Thomas, trick bike rider, performing; at 5 p. m., Fred Reckless, sensational high pole act, at the courthouse. These acts will be repeated in the evening at 7, 9, 10 and 11 o'clock.

Much Band Music

Music for the show will be provided by the high school junior and senior bands, the American Legion drum corps, the Adelphi Knights of Pythias band, and the Stoutsville junior band, the latter organization appearing only one evening.

The official program today listed the parades, the hour and the line of march. The schedule follows:

CLINICS FOR OHIO CHILDREN URGED

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—The establishment of clinics to treat children, subject to mental disorders, was recommended today by the Ohio Government Survey.

"Constructive services and financial savings are possible through such clinics attached to mental hospitals," the Survey reports. "Admissions to state hospitals could be cut 10 per cent and the number of safe releases increased by a similar amount."

These savings would increase in a few years as clinics would have the effect, the Sherill group asserts, "of reducing the population of the hospitals from 10 to 20 per cent and the cost of maintaining such clinics would be much less than the maintenance of such large numbers in hospitals."

A greatly extended and more effective public service could be accomplished by such treatment from state hospital psychiatrists. A few other states, notably Massachusetts, the report says, have had for a number of years, highly successful experience with state systems of psychiatric and child guidance clinics.

The new head of the American Legion says he will help the AFL stamp out all elements opposed to Americanism. Such as treasury raiders?

Baritone Can't Sing In His Own Residence

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—America's highest paid baritone can't sing in his own home.

Not without the neighbor's "beefing."

So, Lawrence Tibbett's landlord today finished soundproofing the room in which the noted operatic and dramatic baritone does his rehearsing, on New York's swank upper east side.

For two years the tenants in Tibbett's apartment house enjoyed free if somewhat impromptu recitals that generally lasted from 11 a. m. on toward midnight.

None of them complained. In fact, most of them counted themselves fortunate to be able to sit in on the rehearsals.

This year, the neighbors changed.

Not Covered in Lease

And scarcely had they established themselves when they decided a rehearsing baritone was one of the things not covered in the lease.

Complaints began to pour in on the management of the apartment building.

Tibbett's studio-apartment is on the fifteenth floor of the nineteen-story structure. From above, below and both sides non-music lovers aired their woes.

The distraught manager approached Tibbett. The singer was sympathetic, but he was rehearsing and preparing for the premiere of his forthcoming film, "Metropolitan," which makes its debut here next week.

He had to sing.

The manager retired, cogitated and reached a solution. Tibbett went to Hartford, Conn., two days ago to fill an engagement. During his absence a crew of carpenters arrived at his apartment, tore up the floor and walls of the rehearsal room, soundproofed it.

The singer returned to find the floor six inches higher than it was before, the wall bulging into the apartment.

Misses Room Step

"I've got to learn to walk around the place now," said Tibbett, surveying the reconstructed room. "Everytime I go in or out I stumble."

This lady may be going shopping, or to a bridge party—where—really matters little. Neither does it matter how long she will be away. All that does matter is that she will return to a warm home. She won't worry about that because she has set the thermostat at the temperature she prefers.

Automatic Gas Heat gives warmth without worry, and it is Convenient, Comfortable, Dependable, Healthful and Economical. It is Ideal!

The JANITROL gas burner operates automatically. You don't even need a match to start it in the fall, and you can forget it until time to turn it off in the spring. There is a correct size and type to fit your furnace or boiler. It can be easily and quickly installed.

Forget Furnace Worries — Install GAS Heat

No more kindling fires, shoveling fuel and ashes, returning after a few hours to a cold house—not if you have automatic gas heat. Let us tell you the cost of converting an old-fashioned furnace into a modern gas-fired unit. Let us estimate the cost of heating your home with gas. ## ASHVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

The Second grade had a weiner roast last Thursday evening.

The second grade children have made an Indian sand table. They have the Indian long house, Indians carrying canoes, and the Indian wigwam. Later the sand table will have tiny trees. There is a real birch bark canoe on the lake.

The 7th and 8th grades won a new recreation ball as a reward for their efforts in selling subscriptions to the Farm Journal. Several of the pupils earned pencils as individual prizes. George Forquer of the 7th grade and William Martin of the 8th grade were team Captains.

Several of the 8th grade pupils have entered posters in the Circleville Pumpkin Show poster contest. We hope some of them will be successful in winning one of the awards.

The three divisions of the Literary Society met last week and elected their officers for the school year. Independents: President, Gretchen Hedges; vice president, George Cummins; Secretary-Treasurer, Helen Boyer; Program Committee: Jane Lindsey, Richard Hoover, Jeffie Sturgell. Mercurians: President, James Gray; secretary, Louise Schieser; treasurer, Helen Spindler; Program Committee: Bob Mallory, Jane Peters, Lucille Hedges, Junto; president, Hewitt Cromley; secretary-treasurer, Helen Spindler; Program Committee: Ruth Courtright, Jane Alexander, Caroline Kuhlwein.

The Senior have voted to have their pictures taken at the Montrose studio.

The first issue of the high school newspaper by the advanced typing class was published last week. It consisted of four 11x14 pages and was in great demand.

The students of the Junior English class enjoyed very much the Shakespearean play, Macbeth, which they are reading.

The Junior class has 17 members who have attended school every day this year.

The Ashville-Harrison P. T. A. held a very successful meeting

Wednesday evening of last week.

The speaker, Miss Marie Hamilton of Circleville, held the interest of the members throughout her talk and all had a much better conception of what an opportunity room or school can do for a child, a school system and a community.

A membership committee of active persons will soon be in action and it is expected the P. T. A. attendance will be better, hereafter.

BENITO MUSSOLINI -HIS RISE TO POWER

No. 3

As a soldier in the trenches

At the outbreak of the World war, Mussolini, still editor of the Socialist newspaper, Avanti, campaigned for "absolute neutrality." Suddenly he changed and campaigned with all the force at his command for intervention on the side of the Allies against the Central Powers. At the same time he began instigating that furious nationalism which developed into Fascism. From advocacy of peace, Mussolini turned to advocacy of war, telling the Socialist readers of Avanti "it would be absurd to judge all wars alike." This change of attitude forced him to break with the Socialist party and he gave up the editorship of its organ. Mussolini was not the first Italian in the trenches when Italy entered the war, May 23, 1915. He went, finally, as a private in the ranks to the front at Alto Isonzo in the summer of 1915. Mussolini served for three years and was wounded in January, of 1918 when a trench mortar exploded. In the above picture Mussolini (center) who had become a corporal, splits a bottle of wine with two comrades. About that time he lost his mother. Note that Mussolini has become leaner. In May of 1918 Mussolini returned to Milan, invalided out of the war, but still capable of fighting in his newspaper, Popolo di Italia, which he had founded as a weapon against neutrality.

HALF-BAKED

ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, president of the University of Chicago, presents a sound argument defending the functions of college curricula. Addressing the parents of the nation, he warns them that even if children are kept home to guard them from the pitfalls of the world of new ideas, still they will not be safe from their impact. And less safe, he might add, because less informed and lacking in guidance. Newspapers, books and the movies cannot be altogether shut out, he reminds us, and the uneducated youngster may be at a loss how to interpret ideas carried in on these homely channels.

"If they must meet new ideas sometime," he remarks, "it would seem the part of wisdom to have them meet those new ideas (in college) where they are fairly presented by intelligent people who have no axe to grind. If their conversation is disquieting when they come home for their first vacation, remember that their education is not complete, that they have learned only a small fraction of many subjects, the rest of which they will learn as they go on."

DRESSED FOR SLEEP

FASHION decrees are going to make the nightly process of dress for bed something of a ritualistic experience.

Bedtime stories will be de rigueur, but men will have to look the part. The latest in pajamas will tread broad stripes, wide checks and Persian effects as matters of the merest routine. Then will be featured contrasting uppers and lowers, with coats of white silk, for instance, piped with green, having green legs piped with white. Another creation would have this clashing effect in a scheme of azure and canary yellow. Symphonies in Tobacco Brown and navy blue will likewise lull the seeker after slumber.

For once the creatures who people dreamland may find themselves outdone. Apparently men are going to go to unpredictable lengths to deck their frames. It's another triumph for the colorists.

THE PLAYBOY TRADITION

WHOEVER has read one of those entertaining yarns built about the exploits of American travelers in Europe in the early days of the century will feel kindly disposed toward young Jimmy Donahue. Young Mr. Donahue, it seems, leaned out of his hotel window in Rome the other afternoon, called out a loud "Hurrah for Ethiopia," and sprinkled a band of marching Fascist youth from the snout of a seltzer bottle.

It is not, perhaps in keeping with our later ideas of refined fun and international deportment. But it is refreshing to discover an American abroad imbued with some of the old exuberance and bad taste of those who a generation ago traveled lavishly, and a little crudely, in foreign parts. Mr. Donahue is upholding an old American custom. He has acted, we feel, in keeping with the best playboy tradition.

Another device that saves steps in the kitchen is bridge. Familiarity breeds contempt. Look at the way people now feel about debt.

What ever became of the forgotten man? Some political candidates had turkey for breakfast the other morning and some had crow.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

DOUBLE-DUMMY DEFEAT

YESTERDAY we saw how East could fulfill his contract of 4-Hearts against ordinary defense, losing only a single trick in each of three suits (spades, hearts and clubs). It made no difference whether dummy had to ruff spades or was shortened in trumps by South's leads of hearts. Two trump tricks, two ruffs, five diamond tricks and one club trick insured fulfillment of contract. Today we will see whether double-dummy defense can defeat the contract of the hand shown below.

♠ A J 10 8 4
♣ J 8 7 6 5

♥ J 7 6 2
♦ A J 10
♣ K Q 2

♠ K 2
♥ A 9 3
♦ K 4 2

trick, must defeat the contract, and play accordingly.
Lead South's diamond suit, taking the singleton from North's hand. To avoid allowing North two ruffs, which he will obtain if declarer allows South to win tricks in both black suits, before trumps are led, give South the Ace of hearts at once, by leading trumps as soon as dummy is in with the opening diamond lead. When South gains entry with his Ace of hearts he will lead a second diamond which North will ruff, costing declarer his second trick, but taking out North's last trump.

Having obtained his ruff, and still playing double-dummy, have North lead a low spade, which South will win with the K, making the third defensive trick. This gives the following 9-card problem to solve. South is to lead, and East is to win all 9 tricks.

♠ A J 10 8
♥ J 7 6
♦ A J 10
♣ K Q 2

♥ J 7 6
♦ A J 10
♣ K Q 2

Unless South leads a club East must lose at least one trick in playing the above 9 cards, going down a trick on his contract, and making it impossible for East to win 4-odd at hearts against opponents' best defense.

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beaux are things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiancé of her cousin, Kathy Prentice. Kathy is marrying Owen for social prestige alone. When Carol, an orphan, comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to leave her old home in Connecticut and seek freedom and happiness in New York. Isabel Bronson, an old school chum, helps Carol to buy proper clothes and takes her to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Randall, a playboy. Acting on a whim, he takes her to a beauty shop from which she emerges an attractive girl. Knowing nothing of her wealth, he helps her to meet Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who gives her a part in a Broadway show. But Carol does not care for the theater and Owen helps her obtain a temporary job as office nurse with a colleague, Dr. Harding. Carol evades Gary's proposal of marriage but colds herself for showing an interest in Owen during Kathy's absence in Europe.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 26

WHEN CAROL tidied Dr. Harding's desk the next morning, she found the card with Miss Van Cleave's name lying on top of the doctor's engagement book. She saw that details had been added. Miss Miranda Van Cleave was 62 years old, weighed 94 pounds, lived on East 54th street. That didn't help much to revive Carol's memory.

"I'm getting too imaginative," she said to herself. "Just because her name is Horton Van Cleave I can't mean is Horton Van Cleave, because Mr. Horton Van Cleave happens to call after other patients have left and just because he looks like a character out of a mystery novel, is no reason for me to get so curious about it."

Tuesday was usually a quiet day in Dr. Harding's office. The afternoon particularly. But there were three or four patients in the waiting room when Carol answered the instant ring of the door-bell to find a chauffeur standing there and his ancient limousine parked before the door.

"Has Mr. Van Cleave arrived?" he asked respectfully.

"The Van Cleave again?" Carol thought. Aloud she said: "No, he hasn't arrived today. I'll see whether he's expected."

There was a tap on the windows of the limousine and Carol, looking down, saw that an old lady was beckoning to the chauffeur.

"Come and get me, Harkins. I'll wait for my nephew. I'm a little early."

Miss Miranda Van Cleave was like an antique Dresden china doll. There was rose left in the cheeks that must once have been beautiful. Dark eyes burned twin fires in her quiet face as they darted about quickly studying the waiting room, its occupants, its atmosphere. Her step was firm and she required no help from her chauffeur for all that she looked so delicate. She sat upright in the straight chair she had chosen, her outstretched skirt covering her ankles as she kept her two feet flat on the floor as though prepared to rise at any moment. She fixed her eyes on the door and did not move them after that first embracing glance at the room in which she sat.

Momentarily Carol expected the disguised nephew to arrive, but an hour had gone by since Miss Van Cleave's arrival and still he was not there. The last patient had gone. Dr. Harding said: "Make Miss Van Cleave comfortable. I will see her when Mr. Van Cleave comes."

Carol said to her: "Wouldn't you like to sit here by the window? You can see over the park from here and it's lovely now with the autumn leaves so red and brown."

Miss Van Cleave didn't say anything for a moment. She took a lognote from her old-fashioned pocketbook and raising it to her eyes, studied Carol for a short time.

"Sit down, my dear. . . if you have time," she said. And when Carol sat down: "You remind me somewhat of the daughter of an old friend of mine."

Then Carol remembered! "Miss

She studied Carol for a short time.

Van Cleave, I remember you. I think you went to school with my mother to Miss Spencer's school in Philadelphia. I often heard my mother speak of you and I met you one time when mother and I attended a meeting of her class. My name is Carol Kennedy and my mother's name was Carolyn Coles."

"Carolyn Coles," Miranda whispered. "Of course, you are her daughter. You are like her as she was when she was a girl but she was not so pretty as you are."

Carol dismissed it. Small wonder that Miss Van Cleave would not remember her as the girl she had met three or four years ago. That was quite a different Carol from this one.

Miss Van Cleave looked about the room quickly and motioned for Carol to tell her if there was anyone in the hall.

Carol assured her there wasn't.

Then, Miss Van Cleave, putting her fingers to her lips in a gesture for silence motioned for Carol to come close to her and when Carol had put her ear within listening distance, she whispered: "My dear, there isn't time to explain now, but please don't tell anyone you know me. Act as though I were the complete stranger."

When she had finished her little speech, she motioned for Carol to go back to her duties. Very much mystified, she did so. Carol had seen many strange things in Dr. Harding's office and she was not surprised at anything that was said to her but the behavior of her mother's old friend was odd indeed.

When Horton Van Cleave arrived he greeted Carol with a most charming smile, inquired if his aunt had arrived, hovered about her solicitously and Carol was forced to think that she must have been quite wrong about her first impression of him.

Dr. Harding did not send for her while the two Van Cleave were in his office and when finally they left, two hours later, Carol was trying to keep the tempers of the waiting patients on even keel. She had no more chance to see Miss Miranda.

The doctor himself, a worried frown on his usually calm face, escorted them to the door.

That night he returned the history card to Carol. There were no other notations on it. Carol wanted to ask him if Miss Van Cleave were ill but she had promised that lady not to tell anyone she knew her so she could not find any excuse for a question.

Of late, the doctor had often mentioned his interesting cases to Carol but she would not presume to mention them to him first.

Carol was still in the office when the doctor was leaving.

"I'm afraid I have bad news," he said. "Miss Jones writes me that she is returning in three weeks. I'd like to keep you on here but I'm afraid I can't. The work gets pretty heavy in the winter and I had promised to take her back."

The doctor floundered and Carol helped him out. "I understand that perfectly, doctor, and I wouldn't have it any other way. I've enjoyed being here very much. I love the work."

"You were cut out for it and I wish I could keep you here," he said again.

"Are jobs like this hard to get, doctor? I've been studying physiology and I'm getting quite proficient on the typewriter. I hoped I would be able to get another job like this one."

The doctor looked at her sally. "I hope you do, Miss Kennedy, but it's rather difficult at this time of year. However, if I hear of anything I'll be glad to let you know. In any event, you've three weeks more and you may locate in that time. Let me see . . . how did you happen to hear about this job again?"

Dr. Craig sent me," she said. "Craig? To be sure. Craig gets about a great deal more than I do. He knows what's going on. Why don't you give him a ring on the phone, he may know of something. Well, good-night."

"Give him a ring on the phone!" Carol said under her breath to Dr. Harding's departing back. "I'd just as soon lose my right hand as to call Dr. Craig on the telephone. The very idea! He'd think I was chasing him. I wouldn't do that even if he weren't engaged to my cousin or any other woman."

Besides he wouldn't be in at half past six at night. He would be dressing for dinner, a dinner at which he would look superb, so slim and straight and serious in face, the shining white wings and bosom of his stiff shirt contrasting his dark face. A dinner at which he would be sitting next to a woman who was a cross between Marlene Dietrich and Claudette Colbert and who talked in such an exquisite low voice of art and events that it would capture any man's attention.

Since he wouldn't be in, it couldn't do any harm to dial his number.

"Hello," she said in a small voice when he answered. "This is Carol . . . I . . ."

"Well, hello!" The accent on the last syllable was warm and welcoming. "I was beginning to be afraid that you would never call me."

"But I did," she laughed when she said it, and that wasn't what she meant to say at all, nor did she mean to say "yes" she would love to dine with him that night, but she did.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Fascist Plot in Egypt Back of Britain's Concentration in Sea.

WASHINGTON — One of the most amazing contrasts in history is the present action of the League of Nations in backing Ethiopia, as compared with its attitude last winter.

At that time the first Italian move across the Ethiopian border had caused Emperor Haile Selassie to submit the dispute to Geneva. British observers, on the border during the dispute, had submitted a report severely condemning the Italians.

Nevertheless, Captain Anthony Eden at Geneva threw his weight with Mussolini. Not wishing a showdown before the League, he acted as intermediary between the two disputants and then told Ethiopia it should accept the Italians' demands for an apology and indemnity.

The demand was refused by Teclé Hawariat, Ethiopian delegate, who then threatened to carry his case on to the Council.

"But you cannot," interposed Captain Eden. "It is provided that no dispute can be submitted to the Council when direct negotiations are in progress."

"But they have broken down." "That is a statement by you which I will not admit before the Council," replied Eden, filling his pipe.

Timid Council

Hawariat then made a personal poll of the Council. Benes of Czechoslovakia, famous champion of the League of Nations, excused himself on the ground that "larger European considerations" were involved.

All of the others gave negative answers. The Argentine, Chilean and Mexican delegates replied that they were too busy trying to settle their own war in the Chaco. Senor Madariaga of Spain replied that his Government had instructed him to quit fighting lost causes. Even Maxim Litvinoff, consistent champion of small nations, turned down Hawariat.

Not one member of the League Council was willing to vote against Italy.

About-Face

Obviously the two most important reasons for the League's about face were the stiffening of the British and the high-handed militancy of Mussolini. Of the two, the attitude of the British probably counted most.

Now a new behind-the-scenes factor has just been reported in confidential cables received here. In the middle of last summer the British military intelligence made some startling discoveries in Egypt.

There, a group of over-enthusiastic Fascists had hatched a plan to alienate the Egyptian Government from the British. They had actually won over two or three members of the Egyptian Cabinet.

A friendly Egypt is considered essential to the safety of Suez and the British "life-line" to the Orient.

The discovery was followed almost immediately by the concentration of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Uncle Sam, Chiseler

An active chiseler on wage and hour standards since the demise of the NRA codes has been none other than the United States Government itself.

This embarrassing revelation was hurled at Secretary Frances Perkins and several of her lieutenants at the national conference of state labor officials at Asheville, N. C.

The meeting was for the purpose of discussing measures for developing uniform laws on wages and hours throughout the country. But the state authorities bluntly informed Miss Perkins that it was futile to talk about standardizing laws as long as the Federal Government made it difficult for them to enforce the laws already on their state statute books.

One example thrown to Miss Perkins follows:

New Hampshire has a law fixing minimum wages, and maximum hours, thus causing higher costs to New Hampshire laundries.

The CCC camps in the state have a sizeable laundry job that is let by contract under competitive bidding. But New Hampshire laundries were underbid by Maine competitors, who are untouchable by minimum wages and maximum hours. The Maine laundries could afford to transport the CCC camp washing 80 miles back and forth and still do it for less than in New Hampshire.

As a result, New Hampshire laundries are demanding the repeal of the hard-won wage and hour acts.

NOTE—Reason for the Government's failure to protect New Hampshire's labor laws is a ruling by Comptroller General McCarl, requiring strict acceptance of lowest bids.

Not Wanted

Secretary to Supreme Court Justice Cardozo is William Stroock, son of the chairman of the New York Bar Association's Character Committee; also an honor graduate of Harvard and of Yale Law School.

At the close of the court's term last spring, Cardozo asked his young aide to continue another year. Stroock agreed, and in preparation for the winter, leased a modest suburb home.

Just before the court reconvened last week Stroock and his wife prepared to move in. But the real estate agency informed him that the house, regardless of the lease, was not available.

We are terribly sorry, Mr. Stroock," the agent explained. "But in this development, all building contracts contain an anti-Semitic clause. At the time the house was leased to us we did not know you were —er—well, er—Jewish."

"The question of my racial antecedents was not raised," said Stroock.

"No. That's right, they were not. But in view of this clause we can't let you have the house."

Stroock reported the matter to Justice Cardozo.

"In my opinion a contract with a clause of that nature is not valid," said the Justice. "If you were not my secretary I would urge you to fight it."

However, Stroock and his wife found other living quarters.

Eternal Vigilance Price Of Safety From Plagues

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ON A SPRING DAY in 1934, a motor truck could be seen moving around the roads of Kern and Tulare counties, California. The crew which manned it evidently had it in for the ground squirrels. They shot down several hundreds during their few days' campaign, but what they seemed most interested in was picking up the bodies of squirrels which had died of natural causes.

Or, rather, a natural cause, because these squirrels were found to be infected with bubonic plague. Not only was this true of the animals found dead, but a good amount of plague was found in the squirrels which were shot.

The plague has visited mankind many times since the far day in the reign of the Emperor Justinian, when it made its first grand invasion of Europe. The second great pandemic of plague, known as the "Black Death," began at the time of the Crusades and did not abate until the discovery of a new trade route from Europe to the Orient, around the Cape of Good Hope, eliminated the endemic centers of Asia Minor.

Third Still With Us
The third great pandemic of plague began in 1871 and we are still in it. Although the activity of public health officials seldom allows it to spread beyond seaport towns, there are few parts of the world where it has not made its appearance at seaports. Hamburg, Glasgow and Marseilles have each had an experience since the beginning of the century. Knowledge of the fact the disease is spread by rodents and their fleas has been the most important weapon in combating its spread. In the United States the disease is most frequent in California, due to the infection of the ground squirrels. Louisiana, Texas, Florida, and the state of Washington, have all had a few cases, but no other state.

Looking Ahead

Rose Bowl possibilities already are beginning to appear... on the basis of play so far, California and Notre Dame don't look at all bad... Rice has a whale of a ball club, and may get the call... That 7 to 7 tie Alabama got in the opener with Howard still must be regarded as the season's hottest upset... last year Alabama breezed through Howard 24 to 0... Pitt, often a Rose Bowl contestant, but never a winner, may be picked again... more can be said about it after the Pitt-Notre Dame game Oct. 19.

Luck, Plus Laterals

Coach Francis Schmidt, in his second year at Ohio State, admits he has been blessed with luck in having numerous strong-backed young men to conjure with... which is true, of course, but it is also true Schmidt has had plenty of training, and knows what to do with a blacksmith when he sees one... the coach teed off from Nebraska in 1914... coached two years at Kendall College... taught bayonet classes during the World War... later coached at Arkansas... Texas Christian... part of his success at Ohio State can be traced not only to luck, but lateral passes... under Schmidt Ohio State not only has power, but is downright deceitful in passing that leather around.

Mighty Mite

Enrollment at Villanova college, near Philadelphia, is about 1,000 young men, and they don't all play football, but those who do are serious about it... in its first three games this year Villanova rolled up 92 points against Penn Military, Ursinus and Western Maryland, blanking all three... In the quality of its blocking, a fundamental Rockne stressed, Villanova is a copy of his Notre Dame team... and it is small wonder, as Harry Stuhldreher, who is coaching the Wildcats, was one of the great quarterbacks who learned at the feet of Rock... calling signals for the Four Horsemen... On the squad at Villanova are 22 sophomores, six seniors and five juniors... at Notre Dame there are many more candidates than that for each position.

OFFER JOE LOUIS $60,000 FOR BOUT

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 15—Nick Kline, president of the Sportsmen's club today was out with a flattering offer to Joe Louis, the brown bomber, for a match with Tony Galento, the pudgy knockout artist of New Jersey.

He is ready to plunk $60,000 down in cash for Joe's end if he will agree to fight the rounded heavyweight in the Newark armory. He has sent the following telegram to John Roxborough, Louis' manager in Detroit.

"Will guarantee Joe Louis $60,000, to be deposited in bank, to fight Tony Galento in Newark armory on date suitable to your convenience.

Harvard Organized

John Harvard's football destiny is in the hands of an efficiency expert... the old days when chips were suffered to fall where they might are gone... Dick Harlow has really organized the lads, and they have been responding wholeheartedly to his demands for a whole lot of activity and painstaking attention to grill detail. Harlow, brisk disciple of the Warner system, has a sharp eye for errors and is just as quick to see a well-executed play... he is on the pattern of a strict but benevolent father, quick to reprimand the shirker, or reward the player who is in there trying... Harvard this year, by the way, has a fine supply of backs.

SKILLED WORKERS TO GET PAY BOOST

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Skilled laborers working on WPA projects in Pickaway-co will receive a virtual increase in wages beginning October 16, Charles C. Stillman, federal relief administrator for Ohio, announced today.

After repeated demands by union labor for wage boosts, Mr. Stillman ordered a reduction in the minimum number of hours for skilled workmen, from 130 to 72 hours for each four week period. The minimum amount of pay for this period will remain the same.

Thus, in a county, where the largest city is over 100,000 in population, a skilled laborer will work 72 hours and receive $85.00, making his hourly scale $1.18. Before the new order, he worked 130 hours to receive the same $85.00.

In counties, where the largest city is not over 5,000, the minimum pay for the 72 hours will be $55.00, instead of the same amount for 130 hours; in counties, where the population of the largest city is 5,000 to 25,000, the pay is $63.00; counties, where the largest cities are between 25,000 and 50,000, the pay is $70.00; 50,000 to 100,000, the pay is $75.00.

This new ruling affects only skilled laborers, and wages and hours for unskilled laborers, immediate, professional and technical workers remain the same.

The Pickaway-co quota for the additional enrollment of 1800 more Ohioans in the CCC was placed at five. The enrollment of 3100 young men for CCC camps took place throughout Ohio last Monday and Wednesday.

REBUILT GOPHER JUGGERNAUT NICE JOB

Coach Bierman's Reconstruction Operations at Minnesota Show Fine Progress

Sheldon Beise

Captain Glenn Seidel

Clarence Thompson

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Sports Editor
KING KONG KOSTKA no longer roams the Minnesota campus. All-American Halfback Pug Lund plunges in other pastures. All-American Bill Bevan has left only the memory of his magnificent play at guard. Frank Larson, All-American end, has passed along with the others.

How a football team can lose Lieke and other stars almost right equal and still stay right up there on top is not so much your head-ache as it is one for Big Ten coaches. The fact is that Minnesota without having lost a game since 1932, is very tough again, even though Coach Bernie Bierman admits (without a smile) that he has been "obliged to rebuild at nearly every position this year."

A Nice Job, at That
The rebuilding has been good. Bert Baston, All-American end of 20 years ago, now coach of the Gopher wingmen, has been caught smiling as he watches the work of Sophomores Dwight Reed, on the left end, and Ray King, who wears Larson's old number "49", and plays right flank. Baston is even going so far as to call Reed, trimly built youngster from St. Paul, and King, rangy pass-snatcher from Duluth, "my ends," which denotes that the rebuilding at those positions has not been just sticking up houses on the sands.

In Minnesota's curtain raising victory over the stubborn, North Dakota State Bison, Reed accounted for two touchdowns. One resulted from recovery of a blocked punt; the other came after a 45-yard pass from Roscoe. King also caught a long touchdown pass from Roscoe and generally gave Gopher followers the idea that Larson was still on the job.

Coach Bierman's statement about rebuilding must be regarded as downright pessimistic after a glance at the Minnesota backfield. To start with, there is Captain Glenn Seidel, smart field marshal and one of the best blockers in the Big Ten, a fellow who really enjoys the assignment of blowing down men in the path of the ball carrier, though he seldom nags leather himself.

Steady Work for Le Voir
With Julius Alphonse, right halfback, declared ineligible, Vernal (Babe) LeVoir, stocky little jack-of-all-trades, enters the picture. The Babe has been a splendid utility man in his three years at Minnesota, but with beives of grid-greats all-around him, he has been given few chances to show his merit. Last year he alternated at quarterback with Seidel. Since his high school days in Minneapolis, he has played every position in the backfield and two on the line, being one of those lads who isn't particular about where he plays as long as he is in the ball game.

Rebuilding in the line hasn't been hard at all. For tackle, Chief Constructor Bierman had Edwin Widest, 220-pound regular of last year, to place as a foundation. Dick Smith, Willis Smith and Bill Farnum, capable reserves of the past, seem to more than fill the needs of the mentor's operations.

Vern Seich, one of the mainstays of the power line of 1931, is again at guard, suggesting that rebuilding in his sector wasn't so extensive. There are a half dozen reserves of 1934 held over for regular jobs.

Reconstruction at the middle of the line finds Dale Renneholm being ennobled to that spot. Renneholm, a senior, has achieved football success at Minnesota by being the opposite of sensational offering consistency rather than color to the new Gopher pattern.

So there's your rebuilt Minnesota machine, not a bad job at all, as such things go.

In Buckeye Press Box

By Gilson Wright

An opportunity for Buckeye conference football to gain additional nationwide prominence will be offered in two games on this week's schedule.

In one game University of Cincinnati, Buckeye champions of 1934 and leaders this year, will play Indiana university at Cincinnati Saturday afternoon. In another contest Ohio Wesleyan, runners-up to Cincinnati in the Buckeye last year, will meet Syracuse at Syracuse, N. Y. This game also is slated for Saturday afternoon.

Still a third game of inter-sectional proportions will bring DePaul university to Dayton where on Friday night the Chicagoans will meet the surprising University of Dayton Flyers, a new Buckeye member this year.

A fourth non-conference game this week will find Miami pitted against John Carroll of Cleveland at Oxford Saturday afternoon.

Ohio university and Marshall, the other conference teams, will mix at Huntington, W. Va., Saturday in the former's first conference game of the season. This is the only league contest of the week.

Ohio continued to be the favorite with Cincinnati of the Buckeye. While the Bobcats have yet to play a conference game, they handed John Carroll a 19 to 0 shellacking last Friday night after having upset the powerful Illinois eleven, conquerors last week of Southern California, 6 to 0.

McDonough in Form
Dayton showed that its 13 to 0 win over Ohio Wesleyan was no fluke when the Flyers, unanimously consigned by most Buckeye coaches to the conference cellar in this year's race, trounced Marshall, 20 to 6. Again it was the great work of Vince McDonough, star back, that brought victory.

Ohio Wesleyan bounced back into the conference limelight by stopping Miami's big team last Saturday, 8 to 0, although the Bishops wasted eight scoring chances. Each team tackled fiercely, causing numerous fumbles. Ten interceptions of passes caused frequent changes in possession of the ball.

Cincinnati tuned up for the Indiana game this week by giving Denison a 35 to 0 licking last Saturday night. Who, if anyone, will stop these rampaging Bearcats?

BIG JAIL BUSINESS

WOOSTER—Wayne county jail did the biggest month's business it has had for several years during September. There were 46 prisoners and a total of 2,062 meals served, according to statistics compiled by Sheriff Bert Nauman. There were 12 who spent the entire month in jail. Meal cost was about 14 cents each. The population of the jail now is back down to 13, which is about normal.

MICHUTA LOST TO IRISH FOR REST OF YEAR

Big Tackle in Hospital With Head Injury; Waldorf Favors Ohioans

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—John Michuta of Detroit, 22-year-old Notre Dame right tackle, was confined to a hospital here today, suffering from a head injury received in last Saturday's Notre Dame-Wisconsin football game at Madison. The injury, physicians said, will keep the star lineman out of football the remainder of the season. Loss of Michuta is a severe blow to the Irish, preparing for the Pitt game at South Bend Saturday.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 15—After a day of rest, Minnesota's regulars who contributed to the 12 to 7 victory over Nebraska last Saturday, donned their uniforms today to prepare for the Tulane game here this week. Bierman hoped to be able to use his reserves to snatch a victory from the southern team.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—"Stop Ohio State" was the word at Northwestern university today, where the Wildcats genuinely fear the Buckeyes. "I have never known a team to pile up such amazing yardage as Ohio did against Drake," Coach Waldorf said today. "On a purely conservative basis I should say they have a four touchdown margin over Northwestern."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 15—The Indiana varsity, smarting from their defeat at the hands of Michigan last week, buckled down to work today for their game with Cincinnati Saturday. Fowler sophomore quarterback, and Antonini, halfback, were on the sidelines nursing injuries.

SCHMIDT SCORES TWO CRITICISMS

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Coach Francis Schmidt today was on record with replies to two allegations hurled against the Ohio State football team recently.

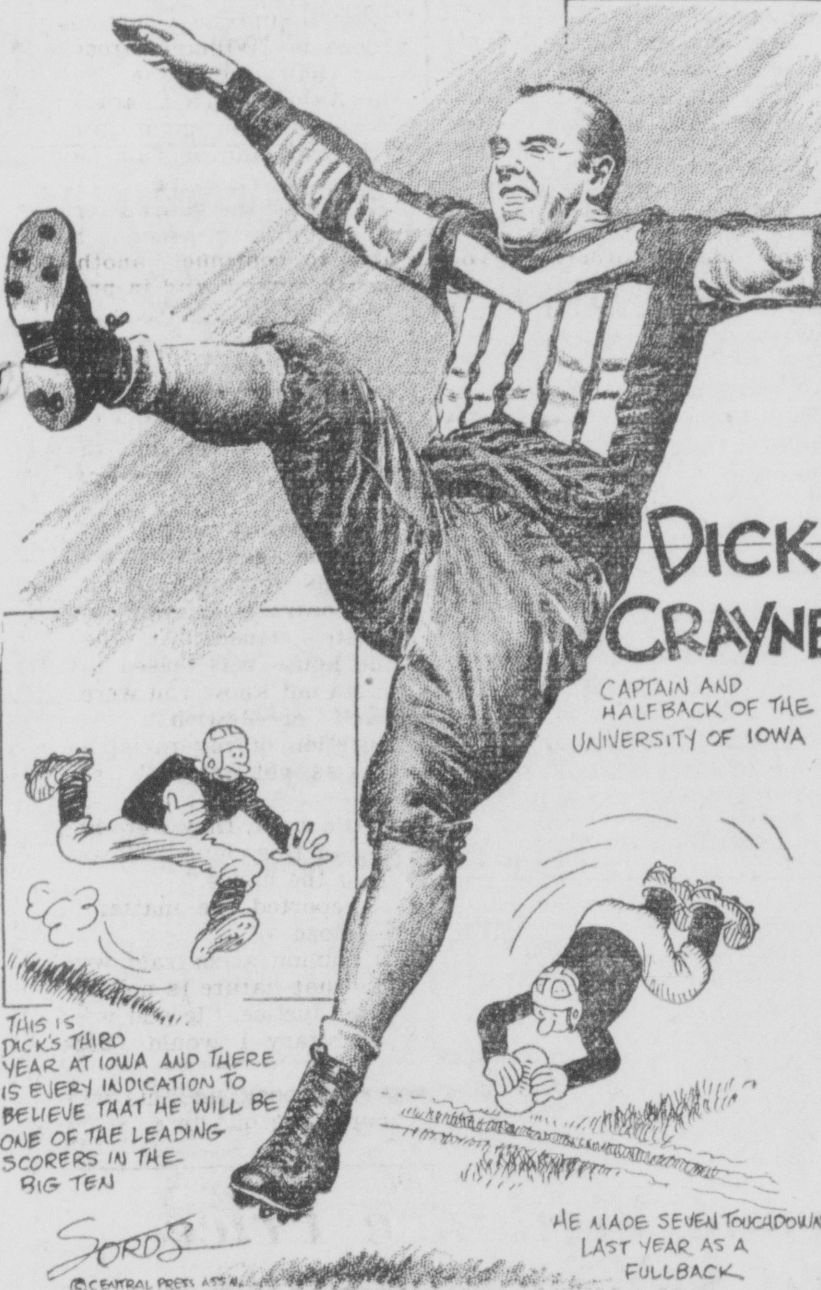

Taking time off from his football duties to address a luncheon meeting, the Buckeye coach threw in a few words concerning his "state-employed athletes" and denied the charges of an Ohio sports-caster who claimed dissension within the Scarlet and Gray ranks. "There isn't anything wrong with a boy working for the state, or wouldn't he be if there were 30 or 40 of them of the state payroll," Schmidt said.

"Seems to me that there has been a lot of fuss over nothing. The publicity has done Ohio State and college football, in general, considerable harm. A lot of people got the wrong impression."

As far as dissension was concerned, Schmidt pointed to the 85 points scored against Drake and queried whether the team's play Saturday looked as though the Bucks were torn by internal strife.

Mr. Garner is the motorist who was struck in the mud. He also is vice president.

Joe Williams On Way to Buckeye Gridder Fame

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—In the fall of 1934, a timid chunky Ohio State freshman—Joe Williams—who in four years of high school football competition scored over 360 points, applied for gridiron equipment at Ohio State.

Just a year later, the name of Joe Williams is widely-known through the nation's football centers. After appearing in two Ohio State games, in which he scored five touchdowns, the bounding Barborton lad appears headed for football fame and glory.

Now Mere Whisper
"There will never be another Chic Harley," has long been the cry of loyal Scarlet and Gray supporters. With Williams on the scene, this far-flung assertion has dwindled to a mere whisper.

In his first two intercollegiate games, he has literally stolen the show from his teammates and opposing players. Displaying amazing prowess as an open-field runner, he serves warning that his name will go down into Buckeye grid annals as one of the best ball carriers the school has ever known.

Only 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weighing 165 pounds, he has exhibited the speed of a rabbit and the elusiveness of an eel.

"Yep, I like college football much better than I did high school playing," Joe confided. "You see, when I first came down here I was a little scared. College football and its big players looked too tough for a little fellow like me. Of course, maybe I'm talking a little too soon because we have all of our hard games coming up, starting against Northwestern Saturday. I might change my mind again."

Before coming to Ohio State, he played four years at Barborton under Coach Jimmy Price. It wasn't until Barborton's third game in 1930 that he got the chance to start. Making his debut as a starter, he reeled off an 80-yard run against Akron East. Since that game, he scored 60 touchdowns in high school competition.

High in League
For three years he earned a halfback position on the honor All-Northeastern high school team, in which outstanding players from the league's 10 schools were selected. Considering that Massillon, Niles, Wooster, Struthers, and Alliance were included in the league at that time, his feat was an achievement.

His speed may be accounted for in the fact that for one year he was a member of Barborton's track team. His best time in the 100-yard dash was 10.2 seconds.

Although he played basketball and participated in track, Joe says he'll watch all of those sports from the stands and devote "my time to studying" while football is out-of-season.

But as matters now stand, Joe Williams will undoubtedly carve a niche for himself in Ohio State's football hall of fame. The name of Williams may find a place alongside that of Chic Harley's.

ANY NEW OHIO TAX TO FACE OPPOSITION

Business, Industrial Leaders Plan to Attack; Three Months' Study Ends.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—A militant program against the imposition of any new taxes in Ohio is being formed by business and industrial leaders in the state, it was learned today from reliable sources.

For four months, an organization divided into three groups, composed of representatives of every business and industry in Ohio, every county and municipality in the state, has been at work studying state expenditures and taxation problems. These groups have worked independent of each other and entirely independent from the Sherrill Government Survey.

A meeting next Tuesday at Cleveland will reveal the surprising results that each group reached almost an identical conclusion. The reports to be presented Tuesday will point out that "with proper economy measures no new taxes are necessary." The organization will publish a slogan all over Ohio, which will read "No new taxes."

Three Are Leaders
The key men of these groups are John March, of Youngstown, leader in the gas and oil industry, Charles Hook, president of the American Rolling Mills, Middletown, and George S. Charles, the Cleveland steel man.

The conclusions to be presented in the reports are similar in many respects to those reached by the Sherrill Committees, that millions of dollars can be saved in state government by more efficient and business-like administration, and that there is no necessity for piling more taxes on Ohio's citizens. Legislative leaders on the other hand, predict freely that approximately 40 to 50 million dollars in additional taxes are essential to meet the state's needs even if the sales tax is re-enacted.

The groups of business men and industrialists have worked out of Columbus, Cincinnati and Youngstown, with the cooperation of chambers of commerce in all sections of the state.

Although business and industry have been known in the past to show and interest in problems of the state, this is the first time in the history of Ohio, that such an active campaign and program have been pursued by business leaders.

As a forerunner to the next Tuesday meeting, Herbert N. Lape, a member of the business executives that made possible the Sherrill surveys, sounded the keynote of the attitude of Ohio's business and industry, when he said:

"Unless the savings, direct and potential, urged by the Ohio Government Survey are made effective, Ohio faces more taxes, which will reach right into the pocket-books of every man, woman and child in the state. There must be a halt to the waste and useless expenditure of public money in Ohio, all of which recklessness tends to increase the cost of living to the everyday worker and to the costs of operation for the employer."

FARMERS REQUEST POWER FOR RADIOS SURVEY DISCLOSES

Next to electricity for lights, Pickaway-co farmers want the current to operate their radios.

This was shown in a percentage tabulation announced at the Farm Bureau in connection with the Rural Electrification program signed by 700 rural residents. Lighting purposes was listed first on all petitions.

The survey showed 85 per cent listed radios as the second unit for which the current would be used and household appliances carried the high percentages.

The list follows: wash machines, 70.5 per cent; hand irons, 68.6 per cent; refrigerators, 44.5 per cent; shallow-well pumps, 26.7 per cent; grinders, 23.9 per cent; pump jacks, 20.2 per cent; water heaters, 14.7 per cent; deep-well pumps, 10.9 per cent; ranges, 8.3 per cent; ironing machines and milking machines, 2.9 per cent, and milk cooling systems, 2.6 per cent.

YIELD PER ACRE IN OHIO CROP UP

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15 — Combined yield per acre of important Ohio Crops, expressed as a percentage of the 10-year average yield, rose from 115 per cent on Sept. 1, to 118 per cent on Oct. 1, the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service announced today.

Corn production in Ohio was estimated at 128,774,000 bushels, compared with 92,200,000 bushels in 1934. This year's oats crop was gauged at 44,388,000 bushels, as against 25,994,000 bushels a year ago.

To Make Decision

League diplomats pointed out France, if Italy should refuse conciliation on the basis proposed, finally apparently was ready to make the final decision on her long-standing problem of whether to side with Britain or Italy in the current crisis.

LONDON, Oct. 15 — Resumption of an Italian large-scale offensive against Ethiopia is imminent, Reuters reported in a Rome dispatch today.

The report was based on the fact field Marshall Pietro Badoglio, head of the Italian general staff, rushed to the front immediately upon arriving at Massaua, Eritrea, from Rome.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 — The seven-point ban on financial relations with Italy voted by the League of Nations "sanctions" committee was viewed here today as the most drastic step ever taken by nations not actually at war with one another.

It was viewed as the greatest world boycott of a single nation that history has ever witnessed. If the members of the League of Nations carry out the seven-point ban, it was seen as virtually severing Italy's commercial relations with the rest of the world.

LONDON, Oct. 15 — A "Holy War" to recapture Arsum was ordered by Emperor Haile Selassie as soon as he heard the news of the surrender of Ethiopia's holy city, said the Daily Telegraph in a dispatch from Addis Ababa today.

Capitulation of Aksum greatly affected the emperor, said the message, and he tearfully summoned the Abuna, head of the Abyssinian church, and ordered him to proclaim a holy war.

numbered about 25 men, some 50 miles southeast of Santa Ana, Mex., where bandits yesterday were reported to have swooped down on the town, killing the mayor and chief of police.

After capturing the hunters the men were forced to accompany their captors about 50 miles before Norcross was released to make his way to the border.

Officials here declared the only source of danger to the party, apparently still in the bandit-infested region, is another flareup of the revolutionary activities.

Many of the bandits operating in this section, it was said, are Apache Indians.

Some border officials here expressed the belief the five missing men would appear at the border during the next 24 hours. They based their belief on the length of time it took Norcross to reach here after he had been released.

head in his hands, on the verge of collapse.

"Let's get some fresh air" it was suggested to him, and, the first to leave the death scene, Hallmark went to a window, his face pasty.

As he gulped at the fresh air color returned to his face and he said:

"Sure gets a man, doesn't it."

"Are you satisfied now that he is gone?" he was asked.

"I am. We are, that is the family. We have felt that this was the only unhappiness which would fit the crime. It is too bad, though that he didn't get this years ago. He was absolutely without any respect or feeling for women."

"How does Mrs. Hallmark regard this?"

"Well, you can imagine she is pretty well broken up. But now that he's gone, maybe it will be easier for us to forget the whole thing. I hope so at least."

There was no bitterness in his voice, only tragic pathos of resignation.

FRANCE GIVES DUCE 10 DAYS TO CEASE WAR

WILL JOIN BRITAIN

Report New Large-Scale
Drive is Near.

GENEVA, Oct. 15—France has given Premier Benito Mussolini just ten days to "come around" and make an offer of conciliation in the Italo-Ethiopian war, International News Service learned from a dependable diplomatic authority today.

If he refuses, France will plunge headlong into full support of firm sanctions against Italy, which she heretofore has refused to do.

Furthermore, it was learned, Premier Pierre Laval has made a new proposal for immediate settlement of the conflict, but is continuing to lay down as the principal condition maintenance of Ethiopian independence.

Must Accept Plan
If Italy is to accept this new proposal, it must be done within the stipulated ten days, according to the ultimatum-like French terms.

Great Britain also has had a hand in these new moves for a peaceful settlement of the war, displaying as usual, an extremely firm hand.

Sir George Clerk, British ambassador to Paris, told Laval that conciliation negotiations with Italy could be started only if Italy agreed the withdrawal of all troops from Ethiopian territory back into Eritrea or Italian Somaliland.

The proposals and the conditions surrounding them were believed

COUNTY HOME COST IS LOW

Expense Here $70 Per Inmate
Lower Than General
Average in State

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Pickaway county spends $161.03 per inmate to operate and maintain the county home, a report by State Auditor Joseph Tracy revealed today. This per capita cost is smaller than the general state average which amounts to $222.23 per inmate.

During 1934, Pickaway county spent $9,661.85 for operation of the home, which housed on the average sixty inmates.

The report also shows that the maintenance of children's homes in the county cost $260.35 per capita as compared to the general state average of $218.65 per child. The average number of inmates in these homes in the county was forty, and the total expenditures for this purpose during 1934 amounted to $10,414.11.

HAUPTMAN GIVEN 30-DAY RESPITE

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 15—Bruno Richard Hauptmann today was granted a stay of 30 days to permit his lawyers to ask the United States Supreme court to review his conviction for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

The stay was granted by the court of errors and appeals—the same tribunal which last week denied Hauptmann's appeal for a new trial.

The order—technically a "stay of remittitur"—delays the resentencing of Hauptmann, made necessary by his appeal.

If the U. S. Supreme court declines to review the celebrated case, Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, trial judge, will resentence Hauptmann at Flemington and fix a new date for his execution in the electric chair of the state prison here.

GAS SCATTERS STRIKING MOB

Kewanee, Ill. Plant Scene of Violence; Damage Reaches
$15,000

KEWANEE, Ill., Oct. 15—Hurting tear gas bombs, Kewanee policemen and sheriff's deputies today dispersed rioting picketers at the Boss Manufacturing Company plant here after bricks, hurled by the rioters, had smashed 10,000 windows in the plant, causing $15,000 damage.

The riot broke out last night when picketers learned that company officials, believing the strike virtually over, were bringing in six workmen to overhaul the plant's machinery and prepare it for resumption of work.

Filing the air with flying bricks, the rioters charged the plant. In the fracas, one policeman was struck by a brick, but was not seriously hurt.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 15—No troops have been ordered to duty as yet at the Boss Manufacturing Company plant at Kewanee, scene of a serious riot last night. Adjt. General Carlos E. Black told International News Service today.

"A serious condition exists there, however," General Black said, "and of course we cannot say what the future will bring."

Divorced From John

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 15—Gerald Thompson, Peoria slayer, was released from prison this morning at 12:16 a. m.

But the lush harvest moon was not for him.

Neither was the sharp tang of an Indian summer night's air. He was dead, electrocuted for slaying Mildred Hallmark, Peoria beauty, in a frenzied outburst of lust.

He was sane. His step was firm. He seated himself in the chair of death. Previously he had issued a four page statement advising potential criminals to embrace religion.

Refused Injection

Even the needles with their memory-dulling morphine he waved aside when prison doctors, as is customary, offered to give him an injection, to make lighter those last 40 steps. He said: "That's all unnecessary. I don't need it. I am not afraid to die."

At 26 young Thompson had repaid his debt as prescribed in the old moose law — an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth.

And watching the relex of muscles pull the young slayer's body into convulsive thrusts against the straps was John Hallmark, father of 17 year old Mildred, the victim of Thompson's maniacal outburst.

Hallmark, tall and husky with a square set jaw, seemed to drink in the scene being unfolded before him until the black masked figure strode slowly into the room between two priests in cassocks and surplices.

His eyes flashed as the slayer of his daughter sat in the chair. His paws worked as young Thompson's body stiffened to the first jarring crash of 2,500 volts then slumped as the current was cut only to stiffen again as another charge of 500 volts spun through his body.

Hallmark dug his nails into his hands. Then he dropped wearily from the chair and sat with his a mystery today after a sixth member of the party, Arthur D. Norcross, New York publisher, reached the border safely.

The men who are still missing in the wild bandit-infested Mexican mountains, are J. H. Burrell, vice-president in charge of overseas operations of National City bank of New York; Jack Dorrell, Pacific coast representative of National City bank in San Francisco; James Bruce, an official of Chase National bank of New York; Dr. W. S. Fulton, founder of the Wheeling clinic, Wheeling, W. Va., and Lee Paul of Wheeling.

Seen Four Days Ago

The men were last seen alive by Norcross more than four days ago, shortly after he had been released by the bandits, who took all his guns, ammunition and hunting equipment and ordered him to leave Mexico immediately.

Norcross declared the other members of the party, whom he had preceded into Mexico, also had been relieved of all guns and ammunition, but had been allowed to retain their camping equipment.

Norcross, after he had been released by the bandits, who held him prisoner for slightly more than one hour, was allowed to retain the services of his guides, who, also, had been relieved of their guns and ammunition.

On horseback, Norcross retraced his path out of the mountains until he reached a village where an automobile was available. He immediately chartered a car and came to Douglas where he boarded an American Airways plane enroute to New York, where he was due early today.

It was learned here that when the party went into Mexico they were advised to leave their personal firearms on the United States side of the border and rent guns in Mexico. This, it is believed, was done.

See No Danger

Officials here declared, in their belief, the Americans are in no immediate danger provided they obey the orders of the bandits.

The party of hunters was captured by the bandit gang, which

Hallmark, tall and husky with a square set jaw, seemed to drink in the scene being unfolded before him until the black masked figure strode slowly into the room between two priests in cassocks and surplices.

His eyes flashed as the slayer of his daughter sat in the chair. His paws worked as young Thompson's body stiffened to the first jarring crash of 2,500 volts then slumped as the current was cut only to stiffen again as another charge of 500 volts spun through his body.

Hallmark dug his nails into his hands. Then he dropped wearily from the chair and sat with his

They are working here after obtaining permission from the show society.

The men are visiting the various business houses in the interest of decoration for the big event. Their work has been praised in many cities where they have decorated for conventions and other large gatherings.

They carry their own weather-proof decorations including pennants, bunting, banners, etc. and put them up and take them down.

RESIDENTS WARNED OF UPTOWN PARKING

Police Monday warned residents not to park their cars for long periods in the downtown district.

Parked cars in the show section are a nuisance, police explained, and they planned to use tags to break up the practice. Monday parked cars had to be moved so booths and concessions could be erected.

Police asked residents to cooperate and not to park longer than absolutely necessary in the business section.

IL DUCE'S SON IS UNDER FIRE

Bruno Flies Observation Plane Over Makale; Four Bullets Through Plane

ITALIAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, ADOWA, Oct. 14—Premier Mussolini's son Bruno's observation plane was fired upon over Makale today, and the young flyer returned to the army airport with four bullet holes in his plane's wings, but not hurt himself.

Bruno was on a reconnaissance flight fifty miles south of the Italian lines over possible enemy country when he spotted a large group of some two hundred native soldiers in Khaki uniforms in the main square of Makale.

The group was supposed to be the Emperor's special escort, which deserted from the Swiss engineer battery several days ago.

Bruno Mussolini dove low over the town and circled three times, taking photographs and making observations, his plane was not equipped with bombs, although it was equipped with machine guns.

Each time the plane circled it was met with a volley of rifle fire from houses in the town.

With valuable photographs of his first exploit under fire or rather over fire—Bruno returned safely to the air port.

ZENGE TO CLAIM SANITY DEFENSE

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—Mandeville Zenge, taciturn young Missouri farmer, today will begin his defense against the state's charge that he perpetrated the strange mutilation-murder of his successful rival for the hand of pretty Louise Schaffer Bauer, Dr. Walter J. Bauer.

A parade of alienists will mark the defense's day in court, for the attorneys fighting for the life of the tight-lipped, love-lorn Zenge have indicated they will show he was mentally deranged at the time of the strange crime.

Testimony of the mental experts expected to testify for both sides through hypothetical questions, as to the sanity or insanity of Zenge at the time of the crime, may leave the jury with something in the nature of the validity of free will to discuss. The defense has hinted it will prove he was the victim of temporary insanity, "of irresistible impulse."

The state closed its case yesterday, as spectators fought in a mad, wild free-for-all to gain entrance to the courtroom and hear the testimony of the comely young widow who jilted her sweetheart of eight years to marry Dr. Bauer, middle-aged chemistry teacher.

NICKERSON ILL

G. I. Nickerson, prominent business man and one of the directors of the Pumpkin show, is confined at his home recovering from a heart attack suffered over the weekend.

E. Main-st Sand Storm Blows Up Real Tempest

Directors of the Pumpkin show went into a sand trap in their meeting Monday night.

For several years W. M. Justus, city service director, has spread the sand on E. Main-st between Pickaway and Washington-sts for the horse show, using city employees.

Last night Mr. Justus informed directors the practice was illegal and he had received so many complaints from residents he would have no part in the sand-spreading this year. About 100 tons of sand is used and is donated

Gov. Davey On Radio

To Broadcast on WAIU, Other
Stations Eight Weeks for
15 Minutes

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Beginning next Monday, Gov. Martin L. Davey will be "on the air" for 15 minutes each Monday evening for eight weeks, it was learned here today.

The governor, through the Democratic state committee, completed negotiations for the facilities of the all-Ohio network of seven stations, with WAIU, Columbus, the key unit.

In addition to WAIU, radio stations over which the executive will carry his messages to the people of Ohio will be WHK, Cleveland; WSPD, Toledo; WKBN, Youngstown; WADC, Akron; WSMK, Dayton, and WRCB, Cincinnati.

Hour of the Monday evening broadcasts will be 7:15 to 7:30 p. m.

Cost of the radio facilities to the state committee was not announced.

Questioned about the theme of his projected radio discourses and also about who is to foot the bill, the governor seemed surprised that news of the venture had leaked out and refused to comment.

He did, however, promise that a "public announcement" later will throw additional light upon his program.

One report, unconfirmed but coming from a reliable source, was to the effect that the eight radio addresses over seven stations will cost $11,000. Ohio pays its chief executive $10,000 a year salary.

E. Main-st Sand Storm Blows Up Real Tempest

The show society by Sturm & Billard.

L. S. Shaner, show director and city safety director, informed the directors the sand would have to be removed early Sunday morning to prevent accidents.

After a long discussion the directors voted for Harry Briggs, horse show chairman, to employ truckers and workmen to spread the sand and then remove it early Sunday.

Residents complained to city officials last year that the sand blew into their homes and business places during and after the Pumpkin show.

Officials Hopeful

All rides were being erected today with idle townspeople watching the operations of the skilled mechanics. Mack Parrett, show secretary, was scampering hither and yon trying to smooth out disputes over location. Tom Krinn was checking up on his free acts to see that all were in town and ready for action.

In fact everything was hula-balo in preparation for the opening of the thirty-second annual Pumpkin show. A bright sun added to the spirit of the week today, and show officials and merchants were hopeful the sun would remain bright through the entire week to draw more of the gigantic crowds.

RUMOR IS BLASTED

Rumors that the Pumpkin show would be called off because of diphtheria were blasted today by show officials. "There are several known cases," they declared, "but these have been quarantined and the show is going on."

The rumors were spreading in several of the county's towns.

that usually visit the big affair into town.

When noon arrives on Wednesday the chimes in the tower of the court house will greet the annual fall festival with a band concert to follow immediately after.

At 1 o'clock the first free attraction will be staged at Main and Pickaway-sts., "The Flying Le-Vans"; at 3 p. m., according to the official program, the "Stratosphere Man" will perform at Court and High-sts.; at 5 p. m., Main and Scioto-st will be the scene with Marie Dumont, accordion wizard, and Silver Thomas, trick bike rider, performing; at 5 p. m., Fred Reckless, sensational high pole act, at the courthouse. Much Band Music
Music for the show will be provided by the high school junior and senior bands, the American Legion drum corps, the Adelphi Knights of Pythias band, and the Stoutsville junior band, the latter organization appearing only one evening.

CLINICS FOR OHIO CHILDREN URGED

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15.—The establishment of clinics to treat children, subject to mental disorders, was recommended today by the Ohio Government Survey.

"Constructive services and financial savings are possible through such clinics attached to mental hospitals," the Survey reports. "Admissions to state hospitals could be cut 10 per cent and the number of safe releases increased by a similar amount."

These savings would increase in a few years as clinics would have the effect, the Survey group asserts, "of reducing the population of the hospitals from 10 to 20 per cent and the cost of maintaining such clinics would be much less than the maintenance of such large numbers in hospitals."

A greatly extended and more effective public service could be accomplished by such treatment from state hospital psychiatrists. A few other states, notably Massachusetts, the report says, have had for a number of years, highly successful experience with state systems of psychiatric and child guidance clinics.

The new head of the American Legion says he will help the AFL stamp out all elements opposed to Americanism. Such as treasury raiders?

Baritone Can't Sing In His Own Residence

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—America's highest paid baritone can't sing in his own home.

Not without the neighbor's "beefing."

So, Lawrence Tibbett's landlord today finished soundproofing the room in which the noted operatic and dramatic baritone does his rehearsing, on New York's swank upper east side.

For two years the tenants in Tibbett's apartment house enjoyed free if somewhat impromptu recitals that generally lasted from 11 a. m. on toward midnight.

None of them complained. In fact, most of them counted themselves fortunate to be able to sit in on the rehearsals.

This year, the neighbors changed.

Not Covered In Lease

And scarcely had they established themselves when they decided a rehearsing baritone was one of the things not covered in the lease.

Complaints began to pour in on the management of the apartment building.

Tibbett's studio-apartment is on the fifteenth floor of the nine-story structure. From above, below and both sides non-music lovers aired their woes.

The distraught manager approached Tibbett. The singer was sympathetic, but he was rehearsing and preparing for the premiere of his forthcoming film, "Metro-

CLINICS FOR OHIO CHILDREN URGED

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15.—The establishment of clinics to treat children, subject to mental disorders, was recommended today by the Ohio Government Survey.

"Constructive services and financial savings are possible through such clinics attached to mental hospitals," the Survey reports. "Admissions to state hospitals could be cut 10 per cent and the number of safe releases increased by a similar amount."

These savings would increase in a few years as clinics would have the effect, the Survey group asserts, "of reducing the population of the hospitals from 10 to 20 per cent and the cost of maintaining such clinics would be much less than the maintenance of such large numbers in hospitals."

A greatly extended and more effective public service could be accomplished by such treatment from state hospital psychiatrists. A few other states, notably Massachusetts, the report says, have had for a number of years, highly successful experience with state systems of psychiatric and child guidance clinics.

The new head of the American Legion says he will help the AFL stamp out all elements opposed to Americanism. Such as treasury raiders?

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

The Second grade had a weiner roast last Thursday evening. The second grade children have made an Indian sand table. They have the Indian long house, Indians carrying canoes, and the Indian wigwam. Later the sand table will have tiny trees. There is a real birch bark canoe on the lake.

The 7th and 8th grades won a new recreation ball as a reward for their efforts in selling subscriptions to the Farm Journal. Several of the pupils earned pencils as individual prizes. George Forquer of the 7th grade and William Martin of the 8th grade were team Captains.

Several of the 8th grade pupils

have entered posters in the Circleville Pumpkin Show poster contest. We hope some of them will be successful in winning one of the awards.

The Junior class has 17 members who have attended school every day this year.

The Ashville-Harrison P. T. A. held a very successful meeting

Wednesday evening of last week.

The speaker, Miss Marie Hamilton of Circleville, held the interest of the members throughout her talk and all had a much better conception of what an opportunity room or school can do for a child, a school system and a community.

A membership committee of active persons will soon be in action and it is expected the P. T. A. tendency will be better, however.

BENITO MUSSOLINI - HIS RISE TO POWER

No. 3

As a soldier in the trenches

At the outbreak of the World war, Mussolini, still editor of the Socialist newspaper, Avanti, campaigned for "absolute neutrality." Suddenly he changed and campaigned with all the force at his command for intervention on the side of the Allies against the Central Powers. At the same time he began instigating that furious nationalism which developed into Fascism. From advocacy of peace, Mussolini turned to advocacy of war, telling the Socialist readers of Avanti "it would be absurd to judge all wars alike." This change of attitude forced him to break with the Socialist party and he gave up the editorship of its organ. Mussolini was not the first Italian in the trenches when Italy entered the war, May 23, 1915. He went, finally, as a private in the ranks to the front at Alto Isonzo in the summer of 1915. Mussolini served for three years and was wounded in January, of 1918 when a trench mortar exploded. In the above picture Mussolini (center) who had become a corporal, splits a bottle of wine with two comrades. About that time he lost his mother. Note that Mussolini has become leaner. In May of 1918 Mussolini returned to Milan, invalided out of the war, but still capable of fighting in his newspaper, Popolo di Italia, which he had founded as a weapon against neutrality.

HALF-BAKED

ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, president of the University of Chicago, presents a sound argument defending the functions of college curricula. Addressing the parents of the nation, he warns them that even if children are kept home to guard them from the pitfalls of the world of new ideas, still they will not be safe from their impact. And less safe, we might add, because less informed and lacking in guidance. Newspapers, books and the movies cannot be altogether shut out, he reminds us, and the uneducated youngster may be at a loss how to interpret ideas carried in on these homely channels.

"If they must meet new ideas sometime," he remarks, "it would seem the part of wisdom to have them meet those new ideas (in college) where they are fairly presented by intelligent people who have no axe to grind. If their conversation is disquieting when they come home for their first vacation, remember that their education is not complete, that they have learned only a small fraction of many subjects, the rest of which they will learn as they go on."

DRESSED FOR SLEEP

FASHION decrees are going to make the nightly process of dressing for bed something of a ritualistic experience.

Bedtime stories will be de rigueur, but men will have to look the part. The latest in pajamas will tread broad stripes, wide checks and Persian effects as matters of the merest routine. Then will be patterned contrasting uppers and lowers, with coats of white silk, for instance, piped with green, having green legs piped with white. Another creation would have this clashing effect in a scheme of azure and canary yellow. Symphonies in Tobacco Brown and navy blue will likewise lull the seeker after slumber.

For once the creatures who people dreamland may find themselves outdone. Apparently men are going to go to unpredictable lengths to deck their frames. It's another triumph for the colorists.

THE PLAYBOY TRADITION

WHOEVER has read one of those entertaining yarns built about the exploits of American travelers in Europe in the early days of the century will feel kindly disposed toward young Jimmy Donahue. Young Mr. Donahue, it seems, leaned out of his hotel window in Rome the other afternoon, called out a loud "Hurrah for Ethiopia," and sprinkled a band of marching Fascist youth from the snout of a seltzer bottle.

It is not, perhaps in keeping with our later ideas of refined fun and international deportment. But it is refreshing to discover an American abroad imbued with some of the old exuberance and bad taste of those who a generation ago traveled lavishly, and a little rudely, in foreign parts. Mr. Donahue is upholding an old American custom. He has acted, we feel, in keeping with the best playboy tradition.

Another device that saves steps in the kitchen is bridge. Familiarity breeds contempt. Look at the way people now feel about debt.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

DOUBLE-DUMMY DEFEAT

YESTERDAY we saw how East could fulfill his contract of 4 hearts against ordinary defense, losing only a single trick in each of three suits (spades, hearts and clubs). It made no difference whether dummy had to ruff spades or was shorted in trumps by South's leads of hearts. Two trump tricks, two ruffs, five diamond tricks and one club trick insured fulfillment of contract. Today we will see whether double-dummy defense can defeat the contract of the hand shown below.

♣ A 10 9 4 3

East requires only a single club trick to go game. It should be obvious that an opening lead, either of a low club or the Ace of that suit, will assure game for East, by giving him much needed club trick. South must not lead a club at any stage of the game. North has a singleton diamond. A double-dummy player will lead at once that North's ruff of a diamond, with a spade, trump and club trick, must defeat the contract, and play accordingly.

Lead South's diamond suit, taking the singleton from North's hand. To avoid allowing North two ruffs, which he will obtain if declarer allows South to win tricks in both black suits, before trumps are led, give South his Ace of hearts at once, by leading trumps as soon as dummy is in with the opening diamond lead. When South gains entry with his Ace of hearts he will lead a second diamond which North will ruff, costing declarer his second trick, but taking out North's last trump.

Having obtained his ruff, and still playing double-dummy, he can north lead a low spade, which South will win with the K, making the third defensive trick. This gives the following 3-card problem to solve. South is to lead, and East is to win all 9 tricks.

Unless South leads a club East must lose at least one trick in playing the above 3 cards, going down a trick on his contract, and making it impossible for East to win 4-odd at hearts against opponents' best defense.

The Romance Racket

MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beauty are things unattractive to Carol Kennedy. She never dreamed until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiancé of her cousin, Kathy Prentice. Kathy is marrying Owen for social prestige alone. When Carol, an orphan, comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to leave her old home in Connecticut and seek freedom and happiness in New York. Isabel Branson, an old school chum, helps Carol to buy proper clothes and takes her to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Crandall, a playboy. Acting on a whim, he takes her to a beauty shop from which she emerges an attractive girl. Knowing nothing of her wealth, he helps her to meet Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who gives her a part in a Broadway show. But Carol does not care for the theater and Owen helps her obtain a temporary job as office nurse with a colleague, Dr. Harding. Carol evades Gary's proposal of marriage but scolds herself for showing an interest in Owen during Kathy's absence in Europe.

CHAPTER 25

WHEN CAROL tidied Dr. Harding's desk the next morning, she found the card with Miss Van Cleve's name lying on top of the doctor's engagement book. She saw that details had been added. Miss Miranda Van Cleve was 62 years old, weighed 94 pounds, lived on East 54th street. That didn't help much to revive Carol's memory.

"I'm getting too imaginative," she said to herself. "Just because her name is familiar, because Dr. Craig happens to ask if the Van Cleve I mean is Horton Van Cleve, because Mr. Horton Van Cleve happens to call after other patients have left and just because he looks like a character out of a mystery novel, is no reason for me to get so curious about it."

Tuesday was usually a quiet day in Dr. Harding's office. . . the afternoon particularly. But there were three or four patients in the waiting room when Carol answered the insistent ring of the bell to find a chauffeur standing there and his client limousine parked beyond the door.

"Has Mr. Van Cleve arrived?" he asked respectfully.

"The Van Cleves again?" Carol thought. Aloud she said: "No, he hasn't arrived today. I'll see whether he's expected."

There was a tap on the windows of the limousine and Carol, looking down, saw that an old lady was beckoning to the chauffeur.

"Come and get me, Harkins. I'll wait for my nephew. I'm a little late."

Miss Miranda Van Cleve was like an antique Dresden china doll. There was rose left in the cheeks that must once have been beautiful. Dark eyes burned twin fires in her quiet face as they darted about quickly studying the waiting room, its occupants, its atmosphere. Her stop was firm and she required no help from her chauffeur for all that she looked so delicate. She sat upright in the straight chair she had chosen, her outmoded skirts covering her ankles as she kept her two feet flat on the floor as though prepared to rise at any moment.

She fixed her eyes on the door and did not move them after that first embracing glance at the room in which she sat. Momentarily Carol expected the dark-visaged nephew to arrive, but an hour had gone by since Miss Van Cleve's arrival and still he was not there. The last patient had gone. Dr. Harding said: "Make Miss Van Cleve comfortable. I will see her when Mr. Van Cleve comes."

Carol said to her: "Wouldn't you like to sit here by the window? You can see over the park from here and it's lovely now with the autumn leaves so red and brown."

Miss Van Cleve did not say anything for a moment. She took a lognote from her old-fashioned pocketbook and raising it to her eyes, studied Carol for a short time.

"Sit down, my dear . . . if you have time," she said. And when Carol sat down, she reminded her somewhat of the daughter of an old friend of mine."

Then Carol remembered: "Miss

She studied Carol for a short time.

Van Cleve, I remember you. I think you went to school with my mother to Miss Spencer's school in Philadelphia. I often heard my mother speak of you and I met you one time when mother and I attended a meeting of her class. My name is Carol Kennedy and my mother's name was Carolyn Coles."

"Carolyn Coles," Miranda whispered. "Of course, you are her daughter. You are like her as she was when she was a girl but she was not so pretty as you are."

Carol dismissed it. Small wonder that Miss Van Cleve would not remember her as the girl she had met three or four years ago. That was quite a different Carol from this one. Miss Van Cleve looked about the room quickly and motioned for Carol to tell her if there was anyone in the hall. Carol assured her there wasn't.

Then, Miss Van Cleve, putting her fingers to her lips in a gesture for silence motioned for Carol to come close to her and when Carol had put her ear within listening distance, she whispered: "My dear, there isn't time to explain now, but please don't tell anyone you know me. Act as though I were the complete stranger I might have been and do not be surprised at anything I may say to you."

When she had finished her little speech, she motioned for Carol to go back to her duties. Very much mystified, she did so. Carol had seen many strange things in Dr. Harding's office and she was not surprised at anything that was said to her but the behavior of her mother's old friend was a new experience.

When Horton Van Cleve arrived he greeted Carol with a most charming smile, inquired if his aunt had arrived, hovered about her solicitously and Carol was forced to think that she must have been quite wrong about her first impression of him.

Dr. Harding did not send for her while the two Van Cleves were in his office and when finally they left, two hours later, Carol was trying to keep the temper of the waiting patients on even keel. She had no more chance to see Miss Miranda. The doctor himself, a worried frown on his usually calm face, escorted them to the door.

That night he returned the history card to Carol. There were other notations on it. Carol wanted to ask him if Miss Van Cleve were ill but she had promised that lady not to tell anyone she knew her so she could not find any excuse for a question.

Of late, the doctor had often mentioned his interesting cases to Carol and she would not presume to mention them to him first.

Carol was still in the office when the doctor was leaving.

"I'm afraid I have bad news," he said. "Miss Jones writes me that she is returning in three weeks. I'd like to keep you on here but I'm afraid I can't. The work gets pretty heavy in the winter and I had promised to take her back."

"The doctor floundered and Carol helped him out. 'I understand that perfectly, doctor, and I wouldn't have it any other way. I've enjoyed being here very much. I love the work.'"

"You were cut out for it and I wish I could keep you here," he said again.

"Are jobs like this hard to get, doctor? I've been studying physiotherapy and I'm getting quite proficient on the typewriter. I hoped I would be able to get another job like this one."

The doctor looked at her sadly. "I hope you do, Miss Kennedy, but it's rather difficult at this time of year. However, if I hear of anything I'll be glad to let you know. In any event, you've three weeks more and you may locate in that time. Let me see, I don't see you happen to hear about this job again?"

"Dr. Craig sent me," she said. "Craig? To be sure. Craig gets about a great deal more than I do. He knows what's going on. Why don't you give him a ring on the phone, he may know of something. Well, good-night."

"Give him a ring on the phone," Carol said under her breath to Dr. Harding's departing back. "I'd just as soon lose my right hand as to call Dr. Craig on the telephone. The very idea! He'd think I was chasing him. I don't want to do that even if he weren't engaged to my cousin or any other woman."

Besides he wouldn't be in at half past six at night. He would be dressing for dinner, a dinner at which he would look superb, so slim and straight and serious in tails, the shining white wings and bosom of his stiff shirt contrasting his dark face. A dinner at which he would be sitting next to a woman who was a cross between Madame Dietrich and Claudette Colbert and who talked in such an exquisite low voice of art and events that it would capture any man's attention.

Since he wouldn't be in, it couldn't do any harm to dial his number.

"Hello," she said in a small voice, when he answered. "This is Carol."

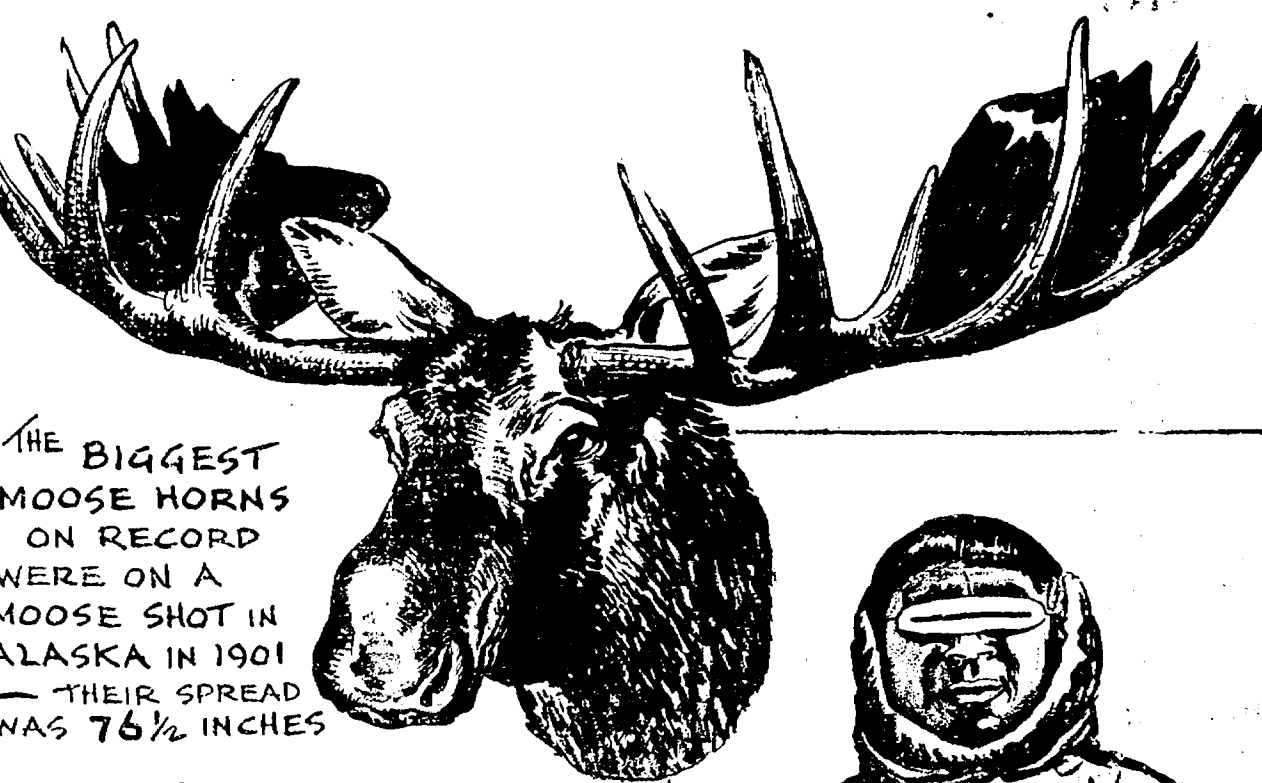

"Well, hello!" The accent on the last syllable was warm and welcoming. "I was beginning to be afraid that you would never call me."

"But I did," she laughed when she said it, and that wasn't what she meant to say at all, nor did she mean to say "yes" she would love to dine with him that night, but she did.

Fascist Plot in Egypt Back of Britain's Concentration in Sea.

WASHINGTON — One of the most amazing contrasts in history is the present action of the League of Nations in backing Ethiopia, as compared with its attitude last winter.

At that time the first Italian move across the Ethiopian border had caused Emperor Haile Selassie to submit the dispute to Geneva. British observers, on the border during the dispute, had submitted a report severely condemning the Italians.

Nevertheless, Captain Anthony Eden at Geneva threw his weight with Mussolini. Not wishing a showdown before the League, he acted as intermediary between the two disputants and then told Ethiopia it should accept the Italians' demands for an apology and indemnity.

The demand was refused by Teclé Hawariate, Ethiopian delegate, who then threatened to carry his case on to the Council.

"But you cannot," interposed Captain Eden. "It is provided that no dispute can be submitted to the Council when direct negotiations are in progress."

"But they have broken down," "That is a statement by you which I will not admit before the Council," replied Eden, filling his pipe.

Timid Council

Hawariate then made a personal call on the Council. Benes of Czechoslovakia, famous champion of the League of Nations, excused himself on the ground that "larger European considerations" were involved.

All of the others gave negative answers. The Argentine, Chilean and Mexican delegates replied that they were too busy trying to settle their own war in the Chaco. Senor Madariaga of Spain replied that his Government had instructed him to quit fighting lost causes. Even Maxim Litvinoff, consistent champion of small nations, turned down Hawariate.

Not one member of the League Council was willing to vote against Italy.

About-Face

Obviously the two most important reasons for the League's about face were the stiffening of the British and the high-handed militancy of Mussolini. Of the two, the attitude of the British probably counted most.

Now a new behind-the-scenes factor has just been reported in confidential cables received here. In the middle of last summer the British military intelligence made some startling discoveries in Egypt.

There, a group of over-enthusiastic Fascists had hatched a plan to alienate the Egyptian Government from the British. They had actually won over two or three members of the Egyptian Cabinet. A friendly Egypt is considered essential to the safety of Suez and the British "life-line" to the Orient.

The discovery was followed almost immediately by the concentration of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Uncle Sam, Chiseler

An active chiseler on wage and hour standards since the demise of the NRA codes has been none other than the United States Government itself.

This embarrassing revelation was hurled at Secretary Frances Perkins and several of her lieutenants at the national conference of state labor officials at Asheville, N. C.

The meeting was for the purpose of discussing measures for developing uniform laws on wages and hours throughout the country. But the state authorities bluntly informed Miss Perkins that it was futile to talk about standardizing laws as long as the Federal Government made it difficult for them to enforce the laws already on their state statute books.

One example thrown to Miss Perkins follows:

New Hampshire has a law fixing minimum wages and maximum hours, thus causing higher costs to New Hampshire laundries.

The CCC camps in the state have a sizeable laundry job that is let by contract under competitive bidding. But New Hampshire laundries were funderbied by Maine competitors, who are untroubled by minimum wages and maximum hours. The Maine laundries could afford to transport the CCC camp washing 80 miles back and forth and still do it for less than in New Hampshire.

As a result, New Hampshire laundries are demanding the repeal of the hard-won wage and hour acts.

NOTE—Reason for the Government's failure to protect New Hampshire's labor laws is a ruling by Comptroller General McCall, requiring strict acceptance of lowest bids.

Not Wanted

Secretary to Supreme Court Justice Cardozo is William Stroock, son of the chairman of the New York Bar Association's Character Committee; also an honor graduate of Harvard and of Yale Law School.

At the close of the court's term last spring, Cardozo asked his young aide to continue another year. Stroock agreed, and in preparation for the winter, leased a modest suburb home.

Just before the court reconvened last week Stroock and his wife prepared to move in. But the real estate agency informed him that the house, regardless of the lease, was not available.

We are terribly sorry, Mr. Stroock, the agent explained. "But in this development, all building contracts contain an anti-Semitic clause. At the time the house was leased to you we did not know you were — er—well, er—Jewish."

"The question of my racial antecedents was not raised," said Stroock.

"No. That's right, they were not. But in view of this clause we can't let you have the house."

Stroock reported the matter to Justice Cardozo.

"In my opinion a contract with a clause of that nature is not valid," said the Justice. "If you were not my secretary I would urge you to fight it."

However, Stroock and his wife found other living quarters.

Eternal Vigilance Price Of Safety From Plagues

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ON A SPRING DAY in 1934, a motor truck could be seen moving around the roads of Kern and Tulare counties, California. The crew which manned it evidently had it in for the ground squirrels. They shot down several hundred during their few days' campaign, but what they seemed most interested in was picking up the bodies of squirrels which had died of natural causes.

Or, rather, a natural cause, because these squirrels were found to be infected with bubonic plague. Not only was this true of the animals found dead, but a good amount of plague was found in the squirrels which were shot.

The plague has visited mankind many times since that far day in the reign of the Emperor Justinian, when it made its first grand invasion of Europe. The second great pandemic of plague, known as the "Black Death," began at the time of the Crusades and did not abate until the discovery of a new trade route from Europe to the Orient, around the Cape of Good Hope, eliminated the endemic centers of Asia Minor.

Third Still With Us
The third great pandemic of plague began in 1871 and we are still in it. Although the activity of public health officials seldom allows it to spread beyond seaport towns, there are few parts of the world where it has not made its appearance at seaports. Hamburg, Glasgow and Marseilles have each had an experience since the beginning of the century. Knowledge of the fact the disease is spread by rodents and their fleas has been the most important weapon in combating its spread. In the United States the disease is most frequent in California, due to the infection of the ground squirrels. Louisiana, Texas, Florida, and the state of Washington, have all had a few cases, but no other state.

Eternal vigilance in the extermination of these animals is the price of safety. Plague slumbers in rodent reservoirs, and breaks out again and again. In 1911 a public health authority said, "It is believed the statement can be safely made that all discoverable plague has been eradicated from the state of California, and that danger of its further spread has been removed."

In spite of this optimism, it is found that twenty years later the ground squirrel population is again heavily infected, and the work of extermination must be done all over again.

It is a credit to the vigilance of the public health service that they are alert to the situation and are working steadily to eliminate the source. Such work is not as dramatic as getting in the limelight and preventing a war, but it is just as saving of human life.

Let us hope that sentimental considerations of the ground squirrel will not make it less effective.

Dr. Clendingen

SKILLED WORKERS
TO GET PAY BOOST

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Skilled laborers working on WPA projects in Pickaway-co will receive a virtual increase in wages beginning October 16, Charles C. Stillman, federal relief administrator for Ohio, announced today.

After repeated demands by union labor for wage boosts, Mr. Stillman ordered a reduction in the minimum number of hours for skilled workmen, from 130 to 72 hours for each four week period. The minimum amount of pay for this period will remain the same.

Thus, in a county, where the largest city is over 100,000 in population, a skilled laborer will work 72 hours and receive $85.00, making his hourly scale $1.18. Before the new order, he worked 130 hours to receive the same $85.00.

In counties, where the largest city is not over 5,000, the minimum pay for the 72 hours will be $55.00, instead of the same amount for 130 hours; in counties, where the population of the largest city is 5,000 to 25,000, the pay is $63.00; counties, where the largest cities are between 25,000 and 50,000, the pay is $70.00; 50,000 to 100,000, the pay is $75.00.

This new ruling affects only skilled laborers, and wages and hours for unskilled laborers, intermediate, professional and technical workers remain the same.

The Pickaway-co quota for the additional enrollment of 1800 more Ohioans in the CCC was placed at five. The enrollment of 3100 young men for CCC camps took place throughout Ohio last Monday and Wednesday.

REBUILT GOPHER JUGGERNAUT NICE JOB
Coach Bierman's Reconstruction Operations at Minnesota Show Fine Progress

Sheldon Beise, Captain Glenn Seidel, Clarence Thompson

By BILL BRAUCHER
Central Press Sports Editor
KING KONG KOSTKA no longer roams the Minnesota campus. All-American Halfback Pug Lund plunges in other pastures. All-American Bill Bevan has left only the memory of his magnificent play at guard. Frank Larson, All-American end, has passed along with the others.

How a football team can lose and still stay right up there on top is not so much your headache as it is one for Big Ten coaches. The fact is that Minnesota without having lost a game since 1932, is very tough again, even though Coach Bernie Bierman admits (without a smile) that he has been "obliged to rebuild at nearly every position this year."

A Nice Job, at That
Bert Baston, All-American end of 20 years ago, now coach of the Gopher wingmen, has been caught smiling as he watches the work of Sophomores Dwight Reed, on the left end, and Ray King, who wears Larson's old number "49", on the right flank. Baston is even going so far as to call Reed, trimly built youngster from St. Paul, and King, rangy passer-snatcher from Duluth, "my ends," which denotes that the rebuilding at those positions has not been just sticking up houses on the sands.

In Minnesota's curtain raising victory over the stubborn North Dakota State Bison, Reed accounted for two touchdowns. One resulted from recovery of a blocked punt; the other came after a 45-yard pass from Roscoe. King also caught a long touchdown pass from Roscoe and generally gave Gopher followers the idea that Larson was still on the job.

Coach Bierman's statement about rebuilding must be regarded as downright pessimistic after a glance at the Minnesota backfield. To start with, there is Captain Glenn Seidel, smart field marshal and one of the best blockers in the Big Ten, a fellow who really enjoys the assignment of blocking down men in the path of the ball carrier, though he seldom augs leather himself.

Steady Work for Le Voir
With Julius Alphonse, right halfback, declared ineligible, Vernal (Babe) LeVoir, stocky little jack-of-all-trades, enters the picture. The Babe has been a splendid utility man in his three years at Minnesota, but with beavies of grid greata all around him, he was given few chances to show his merit. Last year he alternated at quarterback with Seidel. Since his high school days in Minneapolis, he has played every position in the backfield and two on the line, being one of those lads who isn't particular about where he plays as long as he is in the ball game.

Rebuilding in the line hasn't been hard at all. For tackle, Chief Constructer Bierman had Edwin Wisdeth, 220-pound regular of last year, to place as a foundation. Dick Smith, capable reserves of the past year, more than 200 lbs., Vern Bach, one of the mainstays of the power line of 1934, is again at guard, suggesting that rebuilding in his sector wasn't so extensive. There are a half dozen reserves of 160 lbs. held over for regular jobs.

Reconstruction at the middle of the line finds Dale Renschel being consigned to that spot. Renschel, a senior, has achieved football success at Minnesota by being the opposite of sensational, offering consistency rather than color to the new Gopher pattern. So there's your rebuilt Minnesota machine, not a bad job at all, such things go.

High in League
For three years he earned a backfield position on the honor roll. Bierman's high school team, in which outstanding players from each of the league's 10 schools were selected. Considering that Massillon, Niles, Wooster, Struthers, and the others were included in the league at that time, his feat was an achievement.

His speed may be accounted for, he serves warning that his name will go down into Buckeye grid annals as one of the best ball carriers the school has ever known. Only 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weighing 165 pounds, he has the speed of a rabbit and the elusiveness of an eel.

"Yep, I like college football much better than I did high school playing," Joe confided. "You know when I first came down here I was a little scared. College football and its big players looked like a tough job for a little fellow like me. Of course, maybe I'm taking the side of that old Chic Harley's."

MICHUTA TO IRISH FOR REST OF YEAR

Big Tackle in Hospital With Head Injury; Waldorf Favors Ohioans

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—John Michuta of Detroit, 22-year-old Notre Dame right tackle, was confined to a hospital here today, suffering from a head injury received in last Saturday's Notre Dame-Wisconsin football game at Madison. The injury, physicians said, will keep the star lineman out of football the remainder of the season. Loss of Michuta is a severe blow to the Irish, preparing for the Pitt game at South Bend Saturday.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 15—After a day of rest, Minnesota's regulars who contributed to the 12 to 7 victory over Nebraska last Saturday, donned their uniforms today to prepare for the Tulane game here this week. Bierman hoped to be able to use his reserves to snatch a victory from the southern team.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15—"Stop Ohio State," was the word at Northwestern university today, where the Wildcats genuinely fear the Buckeyes. "I have never known a team to pile up such amazing yardage as Ohio did against Drake," Coach Waldorf said today. "On a purely conservative basis I should say they have a four touchdown margin over Northwestern."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 15—The Indiana varsity, smarting from their defeat at the hands of Michigan last week, buckled down to work today for their game with Cincinnati Saturday. Fowler sophomore quarterback, and Antzini, halfback, were on the sidelines nursing injuries.

SCHMIDT SCORES
TWO CRITICISMS

COLUMBUS, Oct. 15—Coach Francis Schmidt today was on record with replies to two allegations hurled against the Ohio State football team recently.

Taking time off from his football duties to address a luncheon meeting, the Buckeye coach threw in a few words concerning his "state-employed athletes" and denied the charges of an Ohio sports-caster who claimed dissension within the Scarlet and Gray ranks. "There isn't anything wrong with a boy working for the state, or wouldn't be if there were 30 or 40 of them of the state payroll," Schmidt said.

"Seems to me that there has been a lot of fuss over nothing. The publicity has done Ohio State and college football, in general, considerable harm. A lot of people got the wrong impression."

As far as dissension was concerned, Schmidt pointed to the 35 points scored against Drake and queried whether the team's play Saturday looked as though the Bucks were torn by internal strife.

Mr. Garner is the motorist who was struck in the mud. He also is vice president.

In Buckeye Press Box

By Gilson Wright
An opportunity for Buckeye conference football to gain additional nationwide prominence will be offered in two games on this week's schedule.

In one game University of Cincinnati, Buckeye champions of 1934 and leaders this year, will play Indiana university at Cincinnati Saturday afternoon. In another contest Ohio Wesleyan, runners-up to Cincinnati in the Buckeye last year, will meet Syracuse at Syracuse, N. Y. This game also is slated for Saturday afternoon.

Still a third game of inter-sectional proportions will bring DePaul university to Dayton where on Friday night the Chicagoans will meet the surprising University of Dayton Flyers, a new Buckeye member this year.

A fourth non-conference game this week will find Miami pitted against John Carroll of Cleveland at Oxford Saturday afternoon. Ohio university and Marshall, the other conference teams, will mix at Huntington, W. Va., Saturday in the former's first conference game of the season. This is the only league contest of the week.

Ohio continued to be the favorite with Cincinnati of the Buckeyes. While the Bobcats have yet to play a conference game, they handed John Carroll a 49 to 0 shellacking last Friday night after having upset the powerful Illinois eleven, conquerors last week of Southern California, 6 to 0.

McDonough in Form
Dayton showed that its 13 to 0 win over Ohio Wesleyan was no fluke when the Flyers, unanimously consigned by most Buckeye coaches to the conference cellar in this year's race, trounced Marshall, 20 to 6. Again it was the great work of Vince McDonough, star back, that brought victory.

Ohio Wesleyan bounced back into the conference limelight by stopping Miami's big team last Saturday, 3 to 0, although the Bishops wasted eight scoring chances. Each team tackled fiercely, causing numerous fumbles. Ten interceptions of passes caused frequent changes in possession of the ball.

Cincinnati tuned up for the Indiana game this week by giving Denison a 35 to 0 licking last Saturday night. Who, if anyone, will stop these rampaging Bearcats?

Fined in Flag Case

Carleton B. Nichols and son

Fined $25 for upholding his eight-year-old son's refusal to salute the American flag in daily school exercises at Lynn, Mass., Carleton B. Nichols, Jr., is photographed with the boy. The Nichols are members of an anti-militaristic religious denomination which makes obedience to the flag incompatible with their interpretation of the law of God.

to be unacceptable to Premier Mussolini, but their great importance lay in the ten-day time limit firmly attached.

To Make Decision

League diplomats pointed out France, if Italy should refuse conciliation on the basis proposed, finally apparently was ready to make the final decision on her long-standing problem of whether to side with Britain or Italy in the current crisis.

LONDON, Oct. 15—Resumption of an Italian large-scale offensive against Ethiopia is imminent, Reuters reported in a Rome dispatch today.

The report was based on the fact field Marshall Pietro Badoglio, head of the Italian general staff, rushed to the front immediately upon arriving at Massaua, Eritrea, from Rome.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—The seven-point ban on financial relations with Italy voted by the League of Nations "sanctions" committee was viewed here today as the most drastic step ever taken by nations not actually at war with one another.

It was viewed as the greatest world boycott of a single nation that history has ever witnessed.

If the members of the League of Nations carry out the seven-point ban, it was seen as virtually severing Italy's commercial relations with the rest of the world.

LONDON, Oct. 15—A "Holy War" to recapture Arsum was ordered by Emperor Haile Selassie as soon as he heard the news of the surrender of Ethiopia's holy city, said the Daily Telegraph in a dispatch from Addis Ababa today.

Capitulation of Aksum greatly affected the emperor, said the message, and he tearfully summoned the Abuna, head of the Abyssinian church, and ordered him to proclaim a holy war.

numbered about 25 men, some 50 miles southeast of Santa Ana, Mex., where bandits yesterday were reported to have swooped down on the town, killing the mayor and chief of police.

After capturing the hunters the men were forced to accompany their captors about 50 miles before Norcross was released to make his way to the border.

Officials here declared the only source of danger to the party, apparently still in the bandit-infested region, is another flareup of the revolutionary activities.

Many of the bandits operating in this section, it was said, are Apache Indians.

Some border officials here expressed the belief the five missing men would appear at the border during the next 24 hours. They based their belief on the length of time it took Norcross to reach here after he had been released.

head in his hands, on the verge of collapse.

"Let's get some fresh air" it was suggested to him, and the first to leave the death scene, Hallmark went to a window, his face pasty.

As he gulped at the fresh air color returned to his face and he said:

"Sure gets a man, doesn't it."

"Are you satisfied now that he is 'gone'?" he was asked.

"I am. We are, that is the family. We have felt that this was the only punishment which would fit the crime. It is too bad, though that he didn't get this years ago. He was absolutely without any respect or feeling for women."

"How does Mrs. Hallmark regard this?"

"Well, you can imagine she is pretty well broken up. But now that he's gone, maybe it will be easier for us to forget the whole thing. I hope so at least."

"There was no bitterness in his voice, only tragic pathos of resignation."

THEY'RE A FAKE!

PRESCOTT, Ariz. — James Watts, a retired Indian reservation agent, says the celebrated Hopi Indian snake dances are as harmless as child's play. "The snakes," he declared, "are defanged a few hours before the dances."
